Pierre Laval Is Gravely Wounded By French Assassin at Versailles; Three Henchmen Struck by Bullets

British Raiders Seize Nazi Officers In French Cafe

By COLONEL FREDERICK PALMER.
Military Expert, North American Newspaper Alliance.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—RAF bombings of Germany and the French invasion ports are not the only present reminders to Adolf Hitler that he is fighting on two fronts. Without going into undue details, the fact, which is no secret to the German high command, that the British have made some clever and successful land raids on the Flanders and French coasts, may be made known.

That group of German officers, who were having a lush time in the small hours in a French cafe, had a reason beyond their control for not reporting for duty that morning. It was not a case of their being classed as absent without leave, but as captured.

Over in a British prison camp they are in no position to inform their superior officer how it was they were taken very suddenly, as they were enjoying their latest round of drinks, "the house was pinched."

Every entrance had been covered. It was "stick 'em up," and "come with us," and come fast, as they looked into the muzzles of revolvers, rifles and tommy guns in the hands of British soldiers.

German sentries had been overcome. A guarded path was clear along which to hurry the Germans on board a waiting boat for a swifter crossing to England than was ever made on the fastest channel steamer in peace time.

Speed is one of the indispensable essentials in such a daring adventure for which there is the pick of personnel in soldiers in a home army restless for action, among whom are many who know the French language and the French coast and adjacent country from previous service there.

Every man is thoroughly drilled and rehearsed for his part. He knows just what he has to do, whatever the emergencies he has to meet, in split-second teamwork with cat's-eye vision in the dark. Account is taken of the chance of being cut off in a cutout operation which has some likeness in the trench raids of the World War. A man who gets out of touch and fails to turn up at the boat on time will have to remain behind for the sake of a getaway of his companions with what they have already gained.

Beyond speed of boats and legs and dexterous maneuver there are further useful auxiliaries in the raids. A British motorcycle on a night exploring trip can go fast as a German motorcycle in the vanguard of a panzer division.

Other purposes than bringing in prisoners are served. Sources of information include friends in an enemy-held country in addition to the irritation the raids cause the German commanders. And the consequent dressing-down their subordinates receive.

There is no mention that the Germans have attempted similar raids on the British coast. They lack command of the sea and have to go through a very close order patrol system both off and on shore. But we are told of German attempts to land spies in British uniforms and civil clothes in Britain, which have failed in a country where every

Iranian Peace Plea Reported As Allies Gain

German Troops Reach Moscow-Leningrad Rail Line, Nazis Say.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

The war in Europe was fast driving to new climaxes yesterday as Iran, being cut apart by the British-Russian invasion, was reported to have delivered a plea that the Iranian war end, and the Germans reported their troops had reached the Leningrad-Moscow railway in a drive to cut off Russia's second largest city from its capital.

Iran was said to have guaranteed that all Germans except a few in indispensable technical posts would be ousted within a week, and even those allowed to remain would be expelled as soon as substitutes were trained.

The cabinet of Premier Ali Mansur, at war with Britain and Russia, resigned early today and Reza Shah Pahlavi, ruler of Iran, ordered the ministers to continue their tasks until another cabinet is formed.

Rail Center Claimed.

Adolf Hitler's headquarters reported that the 22d Russian army had been annihilated in a tremendous battle in which the Wehrmacht in the Nevel area advanced 40 miles, captured the roundhouse and airport town of Velikie Luki, killed 40,000 Russians and took 30,000 prisoners.

Front-line Russian dispatches reported the German invaders, after standing for more than a month in the outskirts of the city of "K," have been hurled far back by Red army counterattacks which cost the Nazis scores of thousands of men.

The city was not identified except by the initial. (It might be Kiev.)

This account was published in Izvestia, the official government newspaper, as the battles for Leningrad in the north and Odessa in the south continued.

Progress Continues.

The Russians thus far have not acknowledged loss of Dnieperopetrovsk, capture of which was announced by the Germans Tuesday. A Vichy report said the giant Dnieperostrovoi dam below Dnieperopetrovsk had been blown up.

In the Iran affair, the Red army reported occupation of four main towns in northern Iran: Dilman, Tabriz, Ardebil and Lissar. Progress is continuing all along the line from the Turkish border to the Caspian sea, it was stated.

The Allied invasion was fast cutting Iran apart, with British troops driving 40 miles north of the Persian gulf to take Marid.

As to Iran's minute navy, it was reported substantially wiped out in a brush in the gulf with British warships in which Iranian Admiral Bayendor was killed, two Iranians sloops were sunk and four gunboats captured.

The reddish glare of a great fire and the thunder of artillery led Finns to believe that the Estonian capital of Tallinn, 50 miles to the south across the Gulf of Finland, was being destroyed by its Russian garrison.

Court Battle Over Operation Of WGST Seen

New Contract Would Turn Management to Lucas and Jenkins.

A court fight over the operation of radio station WGST appeared certain yesterday after the Governor and representatives of the State Board of Regents approved a 10-year contract placing full control of the station in Georgia Tech and turning its operation over to Lucas & Jenkins, theater owners.

This contract, however, must be approved by the Federal Communications Commission before it becomes effective, the Governor said.

It was learned officially that Southern Broadcasting Stations, the present operators, will bring litigation aimed at forcing the regents to carry out the present contract which runs until January, 1950. This litigation, it was said, would probably be in the form of injunction proceedings to keep the board from invalidating the contract signed in 1936 with the Southern Broadcasting Stations, of which Clarence Calhoun, of Atlanta, is president.

20 Meetings.

It was understood that representatives of the Southern Broadcasting Stations had met with representatives of the regents approximately 20 times and that 12 or more agreements had been attempted.

None of these was acceptable, however, until the Board of Regents meeting August 11 in Tifton, when an agreement was reached providing for virtually the same revenue as the contract announced yesterday. However, as a means of keeping the station out of politics it did not place control in the Governor and the Board of Regents.

One of the conditions of this contract, it was said, was that the Southern Broadcasting Stations would sell a percentage of its stock to Lucas and Jenkins, who were reported to have withdrawn and made an offer to purchase.

This agreement was believed to have been acceptable to everyone concerned until the Governor and his staff met at St. Simon Island. Since that time the only proposal submitted involving the Southern Broadcasting Stations contained no date or termination and placed control in the Governor and a committee. This was refused.

Approval Announced.

The Governor announced approval of the new contract after an executive session with Chairman Sandy Beaver, of the Board of Regents; R. D. Harvey, of Rome, member of the regents' radio committee; Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech; William K. Jenkins, of the theater firm, and Sam Hewlett, Atlanta attorney representing Lucas & Jenkins.

To Pay $5,000.

Details of the contract, the Governor said, are being perfected by attorneys, but he explained it provides that Lucas & Jenkins pay the state $50,000 a year or more. Under the present contract Georgia Tech has been receiving 10 per cent of the gross sales, or about $30,000 a year.

The Governor said the new contract places complete control of the station in a board of managers to consist of the chairman of the regents, chancellor of the University System, the president of Georgia Tech, Jenkins, and his partner, Arthur Lucas.

It also contains a provision, he added, giving the regents the power to terminate the contract in the event the operators fail to return $50,000 or more to the state each year.

The Governor described Lucas and Jenkins as "hired operators," but he did not disclose details of EIFFEL'S "V"—As word came yesterday of the shooting down of Pierre Laval in Versailles, this picture arrived from Paris. It shows the top of the Eiffel tower with a huge "V" flying from the flagpole. The Germans say it signifies their eventual victory. Some Frenchmen evidently think otherwise.

Deat Critically Hurt In Defiant Shooting Before Nazi Officials

'Faced With Terroristic Organization,' Says De Brinon, Fellow Collaborator With Germans.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

VERSAILLES, Occupied France, Aug. 28.—(Thursday)—Pierre Laval, foremost French collaborator with the German "new order," and his aide and faithful follower, Marcel Deat, were shot here yesterday by a 29-year-old French assassin posing as a volunteer in the French Legion recruited to fight Russia.

The condition of the two men was described as critical early today by physicians who worked over them in the municipal hospital.

Paul Colette, the assassin, coolly emptied his gun at Laval and Deat and bullets also struck two other men, who were wounded slightly.

Authorities said he confessed that he had gained entry by a ruse to the Versailles barracks, where the anti-Bolshevik legion was being formed, for the express purpose of killing Laval.

Organization Accused.

Fernand de Brinon, Vichy ambassador to Paris and collaborationist, was in the barracks near Laval, but was uninjured.

Early today De Brinon said:

"We are faced with a terroristic organization."

The shooting occurred in the Borgnis des Bordes barracks near the Palace of Versailles. It was in open defiance of German officials, who were present and who had announced death decrees for French hostages should sabotage, assassination and violence continue in the occupied zone.

Laval was hit four times. The most serious wounds were in the region of the throat and just above the heart.

Deat's Operation Delayed

Deat suffered wounds in the throat, breast and intestine. Not until early today did physicians dare to operate upon him and his condition was described as more serious than Laval's.

A Colonel Durvy, commander of the barracks, and a Legionnaire named Besset, who rushed to Laval's side, also were struck.

As Laval staggered outside to his car, a crowd cried "Death to him! Death to him!"

Almost doubled over, Laval refused the aid of those who tried to help.

German authorities dispatched two of their best military surgeons to Laval's bedside at the hospital to which he was removed and it was understood they successfully removed the bullets.

Branded Pro-German.

Laval was able to telephone his wife after the operation. She left the Chateldon estate near Vichy at once for the Versailles municipal hospital.

Deat, the former air minister, startled France and Britain just before the war by an article he wrote in the newspaper L'Oeuvre. It was entitled "Why Die for Danzig?" and urged the two Allies who had given their pledge to Poland not to fight for Danzig.

He was immediately stamped as a "peace-at-any-price" adherent, and many branded him as pro-German on the basis of the article.

The shootings were followed by an announcement in Vichy that a secret court had decreed summary execution for a Communist (unidentified), and had sentenced four others to from 7 to 15 years at hard labor for putting up Communist posters.

No connection with the Laval attack was disclosed, but the courts had just begun work in the occupied and unoccupied zones alike to enforce the German and Vichy death-for-Communists decrees of last week.

The gunman, Colette, is a red-haired native of Calvados, Normandy. Authorities said he confessed that he had posed as a pro-German Legiannaire not to go to Russia but solely to seek a chance to shoot down the leading collaborationists.

It was learned that both Laval and Deat were warned days ago that they were in danger of assassination, but they refused German as well as French police protection.

Deat's wife tearfully begged her husband to accept police protection, friends said.

Protests Delay 1-Cent Raise In Milk Price

Public Hearing Called September 5; Citizens File Objections.

Formal objections to a proposed one-cent-per-quart increase in the price of milk in Atlanta were filed yesterday with the State Milk Control Board, assuring milk consumers of an opportunity to present their protests at a public hearing September 5.

If no written objections had been submitted to the board, the proposed increase would have gone into effect automatically.

At previous hearings few consumers turned out to express their views, leading members of the Milk Control Board to believe, they said, there were no objections to a price increase. If the consuming public continues to ignore the proposed increase, it probably will go into effect, Charles G. Duncan, director, said.

Mayor LeCraw filed a protest in behalf of the people of Atlanta and also included a protest from himself as a milk consumer.

Today is the last day in which to file written objections, Duncan said. Three other consumers and one producer registered complaints with the board yesterday.

These included Mrs. Felix de Golian Jr., who described herself as a newcomer to Atlanta, and who said: "In my former home, Austin, Texas, milk was 10 cents per quart, only having been raised to 12 cents within the past few years."

Dr. William M. Mizell, an Atlanta dentist, emphasized the effect an increase might have on health.

Olga Fike, of 797 West End avenue, S. W., predicted the underprivileged would suffer most from a milk hike, while Paul V. White, who said he was a producer, urged that the present standard requiring 4.3 per cent butterfat be reduced to 4 per cent,

Torrent Floods Streets; Many Cars Stalled

30-Mile Winds Whip Thunderstorm Into August Squall.

Accompanied by a 30-mile wind and a lively electrical display, torrential rains flooded downtown streets and stalled homeward bound automobiles as the Weather Bureau recorded the heaviest rainfall this month yesterday afternoon.

Within the space of two hours, four-tenths inches of rain was recorded at the downtown weather bureau and residents of outlying sections reported that streets were flooded and impassable in some areas.

As early as 4 o'clock Peachtree road was awash with two separate streams of water which converged and stalled an estimated 150 cars from Fourteenth street north. Water covered the curbstones, lapped over sidewalks and splashed into store fronts, homeward bound motorists reported.

A 30-mile wind sprang up shortly after the rain started and the temperature took a 10-degree drop. Weather Bureau attaches said the wind, the strongest to blow over Atlanta in weeks, had not sufficient velocity to cause an appreciable damage but simply whipped a thunderstorm into a midsummer squall.

Paderewski Leaves Total Estate of $41,000

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Ignace Jan Paderewski, former premier of Poland, whose magic fingers thrilled millions of music lovers during his career as concert pianist, left a total estate, personal and real, of $41,000 when he died June 29, papers filed today in surrogates' court showed.

Application of letters of administration of the estate were filed by Walter J. Bayer in behalf of Mme. Antonina Wilkonska, sister of the pianist and sole distributee of his estate.

Three-Judge Tribunal To Rule On Atlanta Gasoline 'Blackout'

Senate Group Prepares Probe Into East, South Shortage.

A three-judge tribunal in Fulton superior court is today to decide the ultimate fate of the city's filling station night and Sunday "blackout" law, and in Washington a senate investigating committee is launching a widespread probe in the whys and wherefores of the gasoline shortage in the south and east.

On the eve of the senate's probe, Senator Maloney, Democrat, Connecticut, advocated that whole trains of tank cars be assembled to move gasoline into the affected area to combat threatened shortages of gas. Maloney is chairman of the senate's investigating committee.

He said he realized moving gas by train is more expensive than by tankers or pipe lines, but added that some of this additional cost could be absorbed by pressing all unused tank cars into service and making entire "gasoline" trains from Texas to the east.

Meanwhile, the government assumed direction of all water-borne oil shipments by creation of a Tanker Control Board, with Ralph K. Davies, acting petroleum coordinator, at its head. Davies is scheduled to be the first witness before Senator Maloney's committee today.

At the same time, W. L. Stanley, public relations officer of the Seaboard Air Line railway, chairman of the Railroad Legislative Committee for Georgia and Florida, declared that it isn't the railroads but private car lines and oil companies that have control of the alleged "idle tank cars"—necessary to move gas from the fields to the east to relieve the shortage caused by transferring sea-going tankers to Britain.

Judge Paul S. Etheridge Sr., sitting with Judges John D. Humphries and Virlyn B. Moore, are to hear the pleas of some 42 independent stations for a permanent injunction against the city to keep it from enforcing its new

Texan, Grounded or Aloft, Bags Nazi Planes; Now Boasts Seven

LONDON, Aug. 27.—(AP)—A Texas sharpshooter, who knocked his first two German bombers out of the sky as a groundling with one machinegun, bagged his sixth and seventh Nazi planes today and returned to his base with a bullet in one foot.

The air ministry said Pilot Officer William Robert Dunn, of Houston, Texas, was not seriously wounded. He was able to land safely with the two Eagle Squadrons which swept over France with scores of RAF fighters.

His nearest rival in the Eagle Squadron is G. A. Daymond, of Great Falls, Mont., credited with three.

Ten German fighters were destroyed in the day's sweep, the air ministry said.

Before joining the Eagle Squadron, Dunn grabbed a machinegun and brought down two German bombers during a dive attack last fall on the camp where he was serving with a Canadian infantry regiment.

Two RAF fliers collided over the French coast, the ministry disclosed. One pilot managed to fly back to his station but the other had to bail out.

In the first of two sweeps more than 100 Messerschmitts met RAF formations, the ministry said. An Australian squadron which attacked repeatedly shot down three Messerschmitts. An Irish holder of the D. F. C., the only non-Australian in the squadron, got two of them.

Albany Invites Duke of Kent to Visit Georgia

Chamber of Commerce Asks Atlanta To Join in Invitation.

The Albany Chamber of Commerce is extending an invitation to the Duke of Kent, now in Washington, D. C., to visit that city and inspect British pilot training there, and has asked the Atlanta chamber to join in the invitation, Frank Carter, local president, announced yesterday.

Congressman E. E. Cox will seek the aid of Secretary of State Cordell Hull in asking the Duke to visit Georgia, where British pilots are being trained at Albany, Macon and Americus.

Visits to the flying schools and a memorial service for the dead flyer may be held if the Duke accepts the invitation, officials said.

PATRIOTIC PATTERN—Those little holes in the eating utensils which Miss Trilby Miller exhibits here were not designed for beauty alone. They are Uncle Sam's latest scheme to conserve strategic metals. From those little holes, cut in thousands of knives, forks and spoons which are stocked at the Atlanta Quartermaster depot, the government expects to conserve tons of zinc, nickel, aluminum alloy and pressed steel. Miss Miller is a Quartermaster depot employe and photogenic too.

Army Applies Doughnut Theory To Its Cutlery and Saves Tons

Holes for defense!

That's the government's latest idea and those holes are not air-raid shelters either.

They're in the handles of the knives, forks and spoons which the soldiers are using to stow away Army rations in camps throughout the country.

Officials at the Atlanta Quartermaster Depot reported yesterday that the latest shipment, numbering about 80,000 sets, had holes cut in the handles to conserve such strategic materials as aluminum alloy, of which the knives are made, and pressed steel of which the forks and spoons are made. Zinc and nickel, important defense materials, are also conserved by the ton, or at least in sufficient quantities to supply airplane manufacturers with badly needed materials.

Already the dishwashers in the Army camps have discovered that the holes have a use. They run a line through the handles of several dozen knives and folks and dunk them in the scalding water with one operation.

Henry Cawthon Begins Sentence

Henry Cawthon, sentenced to serve a total of 18 months for his part in flogging a man in south Fulton county in a series of whippings by the "wrecking crew" of the East Point Ku Klux Klan, began service of that sentence yesterday.

Cawthon surrendered during the day at Fulton Tower and was to be sent to Bellwood camp for classification before being assigned permanently to a camp or jail.

His sentence is for 12 months on public works and six months in jail, plus a $1,000 fine. Since a part of the Fulton Tower has been designated a public works camp, it was said Cawthon may serve his sentence there.

Forestry Division Shows Surplus

The forestry division of the State Department of Natural Resources had an operating surplus of $15,411.10 at the end of the fiscal year June 30, State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr., reported yesterday.

Expenditures of the division for the year, Thrasher said, were $25,309.59. During the six and one-half months of the former administration he said the division spent $121,829.09 as compared with $103,480.50 for the five and one-half months since January 14 of this year.

Goodwin Says Action Is Part Of Expense Cut

Three More Patrol Officers Demoted to Trooper Rank.

Roger Jacobs, head of the Drivers' License Bureau of the Georgia State Patrol, who joined the department four years ago under the Rivers administration, was fired this week "to cut down expenses," Commissioner of Public Safety John E. Goodwin said yesterday.

Jacobs, a Georgia Tech graduate, will be replaced by his former secretary, Miss Audrey Wooten, of McRae, Ga., who came to the patrol in January.

Simultaneously, it was reported that three more patrol officers were demoted Saturday for what Major Goodwin termed "the good of the patrol." Sergeant Frank Roach, of Cartersville station; Sergeant Fred Culbertson, of Madison, and Sergeant Preston B. Weeks, of Gainesville, were all reduced to the rank of troopers.

Cut in Expenses.

"Our renewal period on drivers' license was over June 30," Goodwin said of Jacobs' dismissal. "So as part of the Governor's plan to cut down expenses in all departments we are letting him go."

"We were just making some changes," he said in the case of the demoted officers.

The personnel changes came as the patrol released a report showing the patrol spent $121,255.27 less during the six months ending June 30 than during the six months period immediately previous.

Expenses of the patrol amounted to $336,831.03 during the first half of 1941, as compared with $458,056.30 during the last half of 1940, before the present administration came into office.

Salaries Slashed.

Major decreases in expenditures included: Regular salaries, $28,607.68; food supplies, $20,139.06; equipment, $26,262.71. The saving on equipment was made possible by the fact the previous administration had just purchased 61 new automobiles before the present regime began.

Only major item in which an increase in expenses was noted was for automobile supplies, $7,466.

The department spent 16.87 per cent more money during 1940-41 than during the 1939-40 period, another report showed.

Expenses from July, 1939, to July, 1940, were $660,790.78, as compared with $794,887.33 for the period from July, 1940, to July, 1941, Goodwin said. A $39,166.59 increase in regular salaries was noted in the latter period.

45 New Troopers Added.

The patrol recently added 45 new troopers and 10 new men in its investigation bureau. It is operating with 101 cars, seven of which have been equipped with two-way radios.

New radio stations are soon to be built at McRae and Griffin to supplement those now at Atlanta, Albany and Swainsboro. The Griffin station will be built with local city and county funds and will be operated by the patrol.

A new patrol branch station will be set up soon at Ringgold, Ga., it was announced.

JuryCommittee Attacks Report In Constitution

Official Threatens To Draw Bill Against 'Silent' Newsman.

A special committee of the Fulton grand jury yesterday objected to The Constitution publishing a forecast of what the jury will recommend in its presentments Friday, and one official of the jury threatened to "draw a bill" against the reporter who wrote the story because he would not reveal the source of his information.

The committee issued a statement that The Constitution story on Wednesday was "not authentic nor authorized by the grand jury" but The Constitution was informed later by a source considered perfectly reliable that the informaton in its forecast was true and that the predictions were accurate.

Gordon McNabb, secretary of the jury, summoned The Constitution reporter before the committee in the grand jury room and demanded to know the source of information for the story.

The reporter refused to divulge the source on the grounds that the facts were given confidentially and that to reveal names would be a violation of ethics.

McNabb then walked out of the jury room toward the office of the solicitor general saying as he went he would go "draw a bill" to make the reporter tell what he wanted to know.

In the solicitor's office, he was told that there was no "bill" he could draw against the reporter, it was said.

The statement issued by the committee was over the names of H. L. Simmons, foreman, and McNabb, secretary.

The story to which McNabb objected was to the effect that the grand jury would recommend factions in the city police administration and the county commission make up their differences and work together for the benefit of the public.

Asked in what particular the story in The Constitution was incorrect, McNabb replied: "You are trying to get free what we are going to pay you to print," referring to the paid advertisement of the presentments, but would not name his specific objections.

Order Restrains License Action

A temporary injunction restraining the city of Atlanta from revoking the business license of the Purity Products Company and Mrs. E. Graivur was granted yesterday in Fulton superior court by Judge John D. Humphries.

Steps to revoke the license had been taken by the city tax committee after Mayor LeCraw had objected to "unfair business practices" of the company in selling food flavors in connection with the Atlanta chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Mrs. Graivur's suit contended her business was legitimate and she had a right to continue it. Judge Humphries' order set September 5 as a date for hearing her plea for a permanent injunction.

The chief executive declared John E. McClure, of Washington, a kinsman, was working out details of the contract. He said no exact provision had been made for taking over the present equipment of the station, which is owned by Southern Broadcasting Stations.

The broadcasting firm controls a contract with the Columbia Broadcasting Company, and it was hinted a new radio station might be set up to retain this contract in the event legal steps fail.

Calhoun had no comment on the action of the Governor and regents.

The contract will be presented to the FCC for approval as quickly as possible, the Governor said.

Negotiations over the radio station have been going on for several months. A committee from the regents was appointed to draw up a contract. This committee presented a contract whereby Southern Broadcasting Stations and Lucas and Jenkins would operate the station jointly, but the Governor ordered it revised.

Previously, the FCC had requested Georgia Tech to negotiate a new contract with Southern Broadcasting Stations on the grounds the present agreement failed to adhere to a new federal regulation requiring radio station owners to maintain complete control of operations.

A survey of reports in the office of the state auditor over the past 10 years showed that the state's annual income from the station had increased from $182.36 in 1930 to $27,334.74 for the year ending June 30, 1940. Figures were not available for the past fiscal year.

Britons Seize Nazi Officers In French Cafe man, woman and child is hostile and ferret watchful.

In their raids the British soldiers go in uniform in legitimate warfare. The German intelligence service is at the disadvantage that it cannot put as tight a lock against the British service as the British can against the German.

We know from the records, which have since been divulged, how excellent, not to say crafty and long-headed, the intelligence service of "the stupid British" was in the World War.

There is no sign that they have forgotten all they learned then as a basis for adaptation to present needs.

No one should make the mistake that these daring small scale raids are the forerunner of an effort to land and maintain a British expeditionary force on the continent. If that is to be one day, the time would hardly appear ripe until the Battle of the Atlantic is won.

To prevent more such raids at intervals in the future, when the longer nights favor their success, the Germans must have more searchlights playing and a stronger naval patrol off the Flanders and French coasts; and more soldiers on patrol ashore when there are fewer and fewer to spare from the Russian campaign and keeping the people of the rest of the conquered territory in order.

CouncilMayAct On Grady Milk ReportTuesday

Debate Centers Around Claim of Excess Bacterial Count.

Reverberations of a milk report issued August 20 showing the bacteria count of milk supplied Grady hospital was in excess of the legal limit of 50,000 per cubic centimeter may be heard Tuesday in city council.

Councilman Frank Wilson, of the Grady hospital board of trustees, told members at a meeting yesterday he will offer a resolution seeking to ascertain why R. W. Hart, head of the milk bureau, was impelled to issue a report on a single dairy without the approval of Dr. John P. Kennedy, city health officer.

Both Dr. Kennedy and Dr. James F. Hackney, Kennedy's first assistant, said they had not seen the report before it was issued.

The Hart report on the supply provided by Mrs. T. E. Turner, Douglasville, showed a count ranging well beyond the 50,000 minimum allowed under the law. Since then Grady hospital has run daily counts on the milk and has pronounced it well within the legal limit. Wilson objected to any report based on one set of specimens, and added the report should have gone to Dr. Kennedy before any action was taken. A failure of the refrigeration system to properly function was blamed for the high count.

Senate Group Kills Soft Drink, Radio Tax Proposals of House

$89,800,000 Whittled From Pending Bill by Committee.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(AP) The Senate Finance Committee cut $89,800,000 from the pending tax bill today by eliminating a house-approved levy on radio time sales, knocking out a proposed tax on soft drinks, reshaping the so-called nuisance tax structure and reducing the proposed tax burden on corporations slightly.

The record-breaking measure, estimated to yield $3,236,700,000 as it passed the house, was lifted to $3,593,700,000 by the finance group earlier this week. Today's reductions whittled the bill to $3,503,900,000—slightly more than the original goal of the House Ways and Means Committee.

The committee voted today, 13 to 6, to wipe out a special house-approved levy of 10 per cent on the profits of companies which do not make sufficient income to pay excess profits taxes.

Its elimination wiped out an estimated $53,000,000 of revenue and the committee then dropped another $12,500,000 by rejecting the tax on radio time sales. Chairman George, Democrat, Georgia, said, however, that some form of "franchise tax" for radio stations might be worked out later.

Dropping the soft drink tax eliminated an estimated $22,600,000 of revenue.

Under the house-approved radio section, net time sales between $100,000 and $500,000 a year would have been taxed 5 per cent, those between $500,000 and $1,000,000, 10 per cent, and those of more than $1,000,000, 15 per cent.

Also eliminated was a house-approved tax on billboards, estimated to raise $1,700,000 a year. The levies would have ranged from $5 to $11 a year per billboard, depending upon size.

The finance group accepted a $5 annual use tax on automobiles approved by the house, as well as the house-approved levies on playing cards, luggage, electric signs, business machines, rubber goods, optical equipment, jewelry, furs and transportation.

The house levy on sporting goods was revised to exempt artificial fishing lures and the 10 per cent levy on electric appliances was made applicable to gas and oil appliances, such as stoves and furnaces. The committee also extended to all household washing machines the 10 per cent house levy on commercial washing machines.

The committee revamped the house levy of 5 cents on each 50 cents of a long-distance telephone charge which exceeded 24 cents, the tax of 5 per cent on telegraph messages and the impost of 10 cents per message for cable and radio dispatches. As a substitute, it voted to impose 10 per cent on the actual charge for long-distance calls, telegraph, cable and radio messages. Committee experts said the tax would not apply to leased wires of press services, nor to news tickers, but would apply to other telegraph and telephone messages of wire services and newspapers.

The senate group approved a tax of $10 annually on nongaming machines and $200 a year on gaming machines. The house had approved a $25 levy on all. The house levy of $15 a year on bowling alleys was cut to $10.

New Priority Ruling Favors Allied Nations

Manufacturers Required To Accept War Orders of Democracies.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(AP)—A new regulation issued today provides that American manufacturers must accept orders for war supplies for the United States, Britain, Russia, China and certain other countries, even though such acceptance will delay or prevent deliveries of civilian goods.

E. R. Stettinius, Jr., defense priorities director, issued the regulation in a broad revision of priority rules designed to expedite the armament program.

In the past, if a manufacturer accepted an order which carried a government priority, or preference, rating he was required to fill it ahead of other orders with a lower rating or none. However, he was not compelled to accept the order if he did not choose to.

Pig Iron Regulation.

The requirement forcing manufacturers to take orders was first included in a regulation placing pig iron under priority control, but it is now extended to all manufacturers, producers, distributors and dealers in the United States.

The regulations said that defense orders included purchases of not only the Army and Navy and other United States government defense agencies, but also those of Great Britain, Belgium, China, Greece, The Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Russia and Yugoslavia. It also includes government orders for delivery to any other country in the Western Hemisphere.

Officials declined to say what would be done in case a company refused to accept an order falling within the defense category, but it was indicated that a persistent refusal might result in cutting off his supplies for other orders.

Other major provisions of the revised system are:

A method under which persons who are unable to obtain material to make defense goods may receive the help of the priorities division in getting deliveries.

Punctual Deliveries.

A requirement that firms holding defense orders must schedule production so that deliveries will be made on the dates required.

Subjecting of intra-company deliveries—that is, deliveries from one branch of a company to another—to the same restrictions applying to inter-company deliveries.

A prohibition against accumulating excess inventories.

The priority system calls for extensive records of purchases and deliveries and the Office of Production Management was given authority to audit and inspect them at any time.

Stettinius also said that persons making "willful false statements" in connection with priorities would be deprived of deliveries of materials and in cases where such action was considered warranted he might recommend prosecution under a section of the criminal code which provides jail terms up to two years and fines up to $10,000 for misrepresentation to the government.

ADDITIONAL ARTICLES UNDER EXPORT CONTROL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(AP) President Roosevelt signed a proclamation today placing under export control all military equipment, munitions and component parts, machinery, tools or materials, or supplies necessary for their manufacture, servicing, or operation, which had not been made subject to such control by previous orders.

Acting under the proclamation, the Export Control Administration issued a schedule prescribing the forms, conversions, and derivatives of the additional articles placed under control. These included numerous animal products and vegetable products, textile fibers and manufactures.

Dixie Teachers Hear Governor Called 'Hitler'

'Challenge to Academic Freedom' Attacked by Robert Eleazer.

BLUE RIDGE, N. C., Aug. 27.—(AP)—Robert B. Eleazer, of Atlanta, said here tonight that the methods of the Governor of Georgia were "ruthless Hitlerism."

He called upon southern educators, at a conference here, to combat what he called "this challenge to academic freedom and wipe out race prejudice by means of intelligent education."

About 100 persons are attending the Conference on Education for Southern Citizenship.

Should this "ruthless Hitlerism" spread to other sections, he said, "self-respecting educators would have no alternative but to resign from a profession stripped of its honor, its intellectual liberty and its integrity and utterly subservient to the dictates of ignorance, prejudice and intolerance."

"The victims of the attack in Georgia," Eleazer said, "were some of the state's outstanding educators, others are expectant of a similar fate and every teacher in Georgia is threatened by the Governor with a 50 per cent cut in salary should the Southern Association of Schools and Colleges dare challenge his autocratic rule."

Transit Salaries Boosted 6 Millions

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP)—The board of transportation voted a $5,999,128 wage increase today for transit employes, but Michael J. Quill, international president of the CIO Transport Workers' Union, immediately protested the raises were insufficient.

"We cannot give any guarantee as to what will happen on the subway from now on," Quinn told the board, adding that workers' mass meetings would be called.

A strike threatened for July 1 on the vast transit system, which collects 6,000,000 nickel fares daily, was averted after Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and CIO President Philip Murray agreed to continue existing contracts until the courts decided whether the city could legally enter into such agreements. Trial of the case will start in supreme court next month.

Outlawing Urged In Defense Strikes

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—(AP) The Veterans of Foreign Wars urged President Roosevelt today to outlaw jurisdictional strikes in national defense industries and recommended that draft-age workers who participate in such strikes lose their deferment and be called into military service.

Delegates to the 42d national encampment took the action in unanimously adopting a resolution after Brigadier General Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, declared, "Every means must be employed" to stop delays in defense production caused by strikes and walkouts.

Substance Represents Entirely Different State of Matter, Scientists Claim; Super-Fluidity Is Characteristic.

By G. B. LAL.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(INS)—New clues about the mysterious liquid helium 2, which may aid in putting this most amazing fluid to work for man, were revealed today.

Professor Peter L. Kapitzka, famous Russian scientist, has made the discoveries, according to a report he sent to an official publication of the American Institute of Physics here, only a week or two before the outbreak of war between Russian and Germany.

Liquid helium 2, as it is known to scientists, is unlike any other substance, its properties as a fluid are so different from those of any other fluid that it is considered as representing a wholly new, "the fourth state" of matter.

Gas, liquid and solid constitute three well-known states of matter, each having its peculiar characteristics.

Rare Qualities.

But liquid helium 2, apart from any of these forms of matter, has rare qualities all its own. Men of science are attempting to find out these properties so that some important applications of them may be developed.

Professor Kapitzka has found one of the most striking properties of liquid helium 2 to be this: It has super-fluidity, that is to say, it flows with greater ease, with less hitch, friction, resistance, than any other fluid in the world.

If a very thin hairline crack develops in a jar containing water, then water may leak out very slowly.

But liquid helium 2 would escape from the jar immediately.

This astounding liquid can flow through a pipe line less than one-250,000ths of an inch wide as easily as water flows in a hose of an inch diameter.

As soon as liquid helium 2 touches anything, it forms a fine film, of less than one-1,250,000ths of an inch thickness, over the surface. Such a film is able to climb upward along the sides of a vessel at the bottom of which lies some liquid helium 2.

Flows Uphill.

If an empty glass is immersed only partly into a pool of such helium fluid, the thin invisble film of the liquid creeps up along the outer sides of the glass, and then falls inside. Thus in time the empty glass is filled with liquid helium 2.

Helium in this "fourth state of matter" exchanges heat without dissipating any of it in any way. Ordinarily one can make heat do some work by making heat flow from a hotter to a colder part, but in the process some heat energy is always lost.

Such loss does not occur in liquid helium 2.

Liquid helium 2 is formed as follows: When helium gas is cooled down the extremely low temperature of 450 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, liquid helium 1 is formed; still further cooling results in liquid helium 2. Its temperature is 456 degrees below zero.

Farmers Urged To Save All Lespedeza Seed

Probable Shortage Is Seen by Agronomist at Athens.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 27.—Georgia farmers were today called upon to save every pound of lespedeza seed possible to cushion a probable acute shortage of a seed supply for planting next year.

E. D. Alexander, agronomist for the Agricultural Extension Service, declared that this long-named crop, one difficult to pronounce, has now become as common as cotton and corn and is rapidly gaining as a regular diet for livestock and the soil.

Alexander pointed out that every effort should be put forth to harvest enough seed for home use and some for sale, as a means of partially preventing a shortage in the supply.

Three varieties of lespedeza being grown in Georgia, according to the extension agronomist, include Korean, Kobe and common. Some Tennessee 76 is also growing, he asserted.

Alexander offered a few suggestions which farmers would do well to follow in harvesting seed from any of the lespedeza varieties.

"The Korean variety will mature seed first but holds the seed well and can be harvested most any time in the fall after the plants and seed become mature and dry. Some seed have been harvested when the plants are still green, but the seed are inferior to those harvested later.

"Kobe and Tennessee 76 varieties mature late and the seed shatter badly when they mature and the plants begin to dry. The seed of these varieties should be harvested when the greatest amount are mature and before they shatter to any extent.

"Seed of the common variety, which is best adapted to permanent pasture, is scarce and usually high in price. All seed possible should be saved. Not a great deal has been planted for seed but there are areas growing wild about over the state that will yield a good amount of seed. The seed of this variety mature about like the Kobe or Tennessee 76.

"Dodder and weed free areas should be the first to be considered for seed, but good seed can be gotten where these pests are present if the seed can be cleaned with good cleaning machinery. Most all of our seed are being harvested with the combine, but some by the use of the mover and seed pan on the mower and rake and threshing machine."

Court Approves Hopson Payments

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP)—An order approving a settlement between Associated Gas & Electric Company, Associated Gas and Electric Corporation, claimants, and Howard C. Hopson, former head of Associated Gas & Electric System, was signed today by Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell.

Under the agreement Hopson and various members of his family are to turn over $4,500,000 in cash and securities to trustees of the system appointed in reorganization proceedings under the national bankruptcy act. The federal government will receive $1,187,987 and the state $276,190 in back taxes.

The New England Gas & Electric Association will receive approximately $113,000 as compensation for alleged overcharges made by the Hopson-controlled service companies.

Hopson is serving a term in federal penitentiary, Lewisburg, Pa., on his conviction of using the mails in a scheme to defraud.

Mad Dog Bites Nine in Lithonia

Nine Negroes at Lithonia were bitten late Tuesday by a dog found yesterday to have had rabies, DeKalb county police reported.

The dog, owned by Emma Sanders, of Lithonia, ran wild for several hours, and bit Catherine Zackery, Hubert Long, Hubert Candis, Alamathis Vaughn, Ruby Mae Vaughn, Stewart Lunston, Howard Vaughn, Zella Gaither and Hollywood Smith, Officers C. W. Austin and T. W. Johnson said.

The animal was killed. Dr. J. R. Evans, DeKalb county health officer, ordered the Negroes to begin reporting to the county clinic immediately for treatment. He also advised dog owners in Lithonia and that section to keep their pets locked up for several days.

Soldier's Letter Reflects Morale

Talk about morale!

The Quartermaster Corps public relations office received a letter yesterday from Louis Vrono, of 696 Cascade avenue, who inclosed the following bit of soldier philosophy sent to him from his nephew.

"This Army is alwa griping about something. . . . But there isn't a man here who wouldn't give his life for it. And I'm not talking through my hat. It's not like it was in civilian life, there's something that comes up in your throat when we are at retreat, and the band is playing the 'Star-Spangled Banner.' It's not patriotism, for we already have shown that by being here. It's just a certain something that makes you feel good to be living in this country."

It was signed by Private Harry Balberg, Battery B, 53rd Battalion C. A., Camp Callan, Cal.

Japan Warns U. S., Russia Against Shipments to Vladivostok

Soviet Advises Tokyo To Keep Its Hands Off

America Stands on Freedom-of-Seas Policy, Hull Declares.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

The Japanese government has made representations to both the United States and Russia against shipments of American aviation fuel to Vladivostok "under the very noses of the Japanese," the Domei news agency reported yesterday.

The Soviet government, confirming the report, announced that in reply it had warned Japan that any attempt to hinder trade between Russia and the United States would be regarded as an unfriendly act.

United States Secretary of State Hull made it clear that this country was standing on a freedom-of-the-seas policy regarding Pacific shipments of war supplies to Russia across the Pacific. Hull had a conference Wednesday afternoon with Japanese Ambassador Nomura at the ambassador's request.

Word "Protest" Avoided.

United States embassy quarters had no official knowledge of the Japanese representations, which were displayed in afternoon papers. The news stories avoided the word "protest," referring to the Japanese statement as a "representation" or a "warning."

Especially displeasing to Japanese, said Domei, was the fact that the high octane fuel passing so near is banned by the United States for export to Japan.

The Soviet government notified Japan to keep hands off all trade between Russia and the United States.

The Japanese ambassador, Lieutenant General Yoshitsugu Tatekawa, had told Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov the shipments through waters close to Japanese territory were creating an extremely delicate and difficult situation in Japan.

No Grounds Seen.

Molotov's reply, delivered in Tokyo by Ambassador Constantin Smetanin, said the Soviet government saw no grounds for Japanese anxiety, and emarked in passing that Russia herself entertained no anxieties over the fact that Japan imported food from abroad.

To Japanese inquiry as to routes and methods of the shipments from America, Molotov replied:

"The usual trade routes, including Far Eastern Soviet ports."

Since Japan and Russia have a neutrality pact—even though Japan is an ally of Russia's foe, Germany—Molotov added this reassurance to his warning:

"At the same time, the Soviet government confirms that goods purchased by the Soviet Union in the United States are destined in the first place for the satisfaction of the growing needs of the U. S. S. R. in the west in connection with the defensive war imposed upon the Soviet Union, as well as for agricultural needs in the Soviet Far East."

Serious View Emphasized.

As Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye and Foreign Minister Teijiro Toyoda were received in audiences by Emperor Hirohito during the day, newspapers emphasized the serious view the government took of the situation.

Yomiuri said "other appropriate measures" had been taken, but did not disclose them.

The government meanwhile ordered rigid rationing of gasoline and oil for all foreign embassies and legations effective September 1. An ambassador or minister will be allowed 100 gallons monthly, a first secretary 80, military or naval attache 60, and all others 40, with quotas expected to be reduced in coming months.

Coinciding with Japanese reports and comments, district air raid practice began in downtown Tokyo, with nationwide civil defense drills to follow next month.

Defense against incendiary bombs was emphasized and the newspaper Asahi said: "We must show that our cities are not the most inflammable in the world, displaying our scientific technique and our spiritual and physical endeavors."

Boll Weevil Damage Heavy at Valdosta

VALDOSTA, Ga., Aug. 27.—With the close of the south Georgia tobacco season, farmers have turned to the regular routine crops and some of them are just waking up to the real ravages of the boll weevil pest.

PUP IN COURT—This is "Skippy," folks. He's as friendly as an old shoe and answers to any name. After spending yesterday at Hapeville police station, he was the center of a court battle last night for his ownership. Judge John G. Slappey awarded him to Mrs. T. W. Hover.

Friendly Bull Pup Takes Over At Trial To Fix His Custody

By DEAN BROOME.

A little screw-tailed bulldog, who answers to any name, and who spent yesterday in custody of Hapeville police while a legal battle was fought over his ownership, had a permanent home last night after Judge John G. Slappey awarded him to Mrs. T. W. Hover and her five-year-old son, "Buzzie."

The friendly pup virtually "took over" a session of court at the Hapeville city auditorium while lawyers delved into thick codebooks and 18 witnesses testified in the effort to decide whether he belonged to Mrs. Hover or C. S. Nichols, Hapeville bowling alley operator.

Mrs. Hover Favored.

Judge Slappey ruled in favor of Mrs. Hover after Nichols identified a photograph of a dog with a white front leg as his lost pet and Attorney Neill Leach pointed out the "stocking foot" of the pup in the courtroom was so short as to be hardly noticeable.

Last night's battle was the second round in the fight for the dog. Monday night Justice of the Peace Neill Leach had awarded the dog to Mrs. Hover, but she declined to post $125 bond necessary in such a possessary warrant case.

At the new trial, Leach represented Mrs. Hover, and Judge Slappey, of Blackhill district, sat on the bench.

Released in the courtroom, "Skippy," as Mrs. Hover said he was called, went first to the defendant and then to the plaintiff, wagging his tail happily. He answered to any and all names and "come in and made hisself fafiliar all around" as one witness put it.

Two Claim Dog.

Nichols said he lost a dog similar to "Skippy" several months ago and when the pup appeared at his bowling alley July 7 he believed his dog had returned. Mrs. Hover said her son's pet was brought from Kansas City, Mo. when she moved from there in December. She first missed "Skippy" about July 7, she said.

So five-year-old "Buzzie" Hover again has his pup and "Skippy" is happy about the whole thing.

Boards To Help Draftees Get Jobs

Local draft boards in Georgia will be called on to aid in the re-employment of an estimated 3,000 selectees who will begin coming out of the Army September 1, it was announced yesterday at state selective service headquarters.

Business firms are required by law to re-employ men who were called into training, Brigadier General Sion B. Hawkins, state selective service director, said.

Those who were unemployed before they entered the Army will be aided, too, in their search for employment by local employment agencies in co-operation with local boards and state headquarters. Some civic agencies also will be asked to aid in getting the men established in civil life, it was said.

The man who can perfectly paint anything but your wife's lips carries his ad in the Business Service column in the Want Ads of The Constitution.

Gulf 'Invasion' Reveals Troop Shortcomings

Simulated Louisiana Attack Teaches Military Lesson Promptly.

WITH THE THIRD ARMY IN SOUTHWEST LOUISIANA, Aug. 27.—(AP)—The Third Army today called an abrupt halt to a simulated invasion of Louisiana by way of the gulf coast after learning in quick fashion lessons it would need to know in repelling a real enemy onslaught.

Lieutenant General Walter Krueger, commanding the Third Army's more than a quarter million troops, stopped the maneuvers after defending soldiers were completely surrounded in a devastating enemy pincer attack by invaders who had successfully "landed" on the Louisiana gulf coast and pushed northward.

The generals leading the troops in the field were warm in praise of the stamina shown by the rapidly-toughening soldiers, most of them in khaki less than a year.

DEFENSE OF RAILROAD IS PRACTICE PROBLEM

WITH THE SECOND ARMY IN ARKANSAS, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Secret orders went out from woodland command posts of the Second Army's Seventh Corps today in the first major two-sided problem of the south Arkansas maneuvers, involving defense of the Missouri Pacific railroad running north from Camden to Gurdon.

Assigned to defend the line, a vital supply link for the assembled Second Army, was Major General Samuel T. Lawton's 33d Division of Illinois, assisted by one mechanized troop of the 107th (Ohio) Cavalry regiment, of about 20,000.

"TANK KILLER" BATTALION MAKES BOW

FORT GEORGE G. MEADE, Md., Aug. 27.—(AP)—The Army's new "tank killer" battalion made its bow in mimic warfare today and the tanks came off second best.

The "tank killers"—officially the Provisional General Headquarters Tank Destroyer Battalion—went into action with blank ammunition against four light tanks in a demonstration before government officials, newsmen, photographers and newsreel cameramen.

All four tanks were put out of action, while the attackers lost several "jeeps."

Pierre Laval, 3 Henchmen Are Shot Down

Peri, a leading Communist, who has been in prison since May, was reported in Vichy to be a probable object of penalties as an example.

Peri is former editor of the old Communist organ, l'Humanite. German military authorities announced last week they would execute hostages in proportion to the violence of any acts of the population.

(The Vichy dispatch concerning Peri was heavily censored, and some quarters expected that he was not the only leading Communist who would face a firing squad for the attack on Laval and Deat.)

The sensational shooting in its stagy setting occurred while authorities in both the unoccupied and occupied zones were mobilizing against the growing terrorism and sabotage throughout the country and while both Germans and French were suggesting that British parachutists might be responsible for the wave of sabotage and unrest.

(London officials merely smiled and would not comment on this report. The British have instituted a "V for Victory" campaign which they said had swept France and all conquered countries. General Charles De Gaulle, leader of the Free French fighting Germany, recently appealed to young Frenchmen to stop trying to escape to join his ranks. Many have been arrested.)

Enlistments Extended

Colette was among the sober-faced volunteers marshaled into the armory yesterday for oath taking and to hear a pep talk from Laval before starting their training. The Germans have promised them new uniforms with red, white and blue arm bands emblazoned with the name: "France."

Their numbers were not disclosed, but the time limit for enlistment, originally to have expired August 30, was extended to September 8.

Another collaborationist, Vichy's Interior Minister Pierre Pucheu, visited Laval in the hospital yesterday afternoon.

Only yesterday the anti-Communist courts newly established by the Vichy government began to handle the cases of hundreds arrested both in occupied and unoccupied zones.

Police raids in Paris continued, rounding up a number of persons described as Jews and Communists, about 10,000 of which have been imprisoned in the past ten days.

The Army IN GEORGIA

"Which way are the hostesses?"

Its part in the Third Army maneuvers completed, the Rolling Fourth Division headed for its home station at Fort Benning from Dry Prong, La., yesterday.

The Fourth, the Army's only completely motorized division, under the command of Major General Oscar W. Griswold, participated in two Fourth Army Corps' problems last week and now is scheduled to return to Fort Benning for two months of reorganization.

The trip home will take three days and will be "administrative and not tactical in nature," it was explained.

NURSES TRANSFERRED HERE FROM BENNING

Three members of the Army Nurse Corps have been transferred from Fort Benning to Lawson General hospital in Atlanta and several commissioned officers of other Benning organizations have been transferred or promoted recently.

Nurses transferred from the station were Second Lieutenant Ethel L. Strain, of Atlanta; Second Lieutenant Mary S. Clark, of Screven, Ga., and Second Lieutenant Sally M. Perkins, of Cornelia, Ga.

Boll Weevil Stops Electric Meter

TIFTON, Ga., Aug. 27.—(AP)—The boll weevil, whose foe appears to be the public utilities rather than the farmer, is reported to be getting into a new field of activity here—and it is not a cotton field either.

A meter reader, alarmed when the meter of an institution of higher learning showed no power consumed, checked into the matter to find a weevil had been making a merry-go-round of the little disc inside which reels off the kilowatts.

It stopped the meter.

Georgian Puzzled By 'Yankee Talk'

HARTFORD, Conn., Aug. 27.—(AP)—The State Labor Department is looking for a boss who dictates letters in a southern accent.

A young woman from Georgia applied recently at the New London branch office of the state employment service for unemployment compensation and in the drawl of the deep south told the interviewer she was a stenographer.

He said that in view of the dearth of experienced office help in that section he probably could find her a job.

"Lord—not yet, suh," she replied. "I cain't understand how you-all talk. I better wait a few weeks 'til I get used to the way you Yankees talk."

80,000 Nazis Fell at Gomel, Russians Say

Reds Re-enter City, According to Report From Stockholm.

MOSCOW, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Germany lost 80,000 killed and wounded soldiers before the Nazis occupied the city of Gomel on the central front, the army newspaper Red Star said today in the first detailed story of that battle.

The account was written by Major General I. Berezovsky, who participated in the defense of Gomel.

(Soviet troops, pressing home a series of counter-attacks, have "re-entered" Comel, the southern part of the central front, the London Daily Telegraph reported in a dispatch from Stockholm, the International News Service said.)

"The Germans paid the heaviest price for the city," the general wrote, but when they entered Comel the "orchards were appleless, stores were empty, warehouses grainless and not a single living soul was in its dwellings."

HOSPITAL TRAINS TIP ON NAZI LOSSES.

BERLIN, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Although the high command has made no reference to German losses in the campaign against Soviet Russia, a glimpse into one hospital train given to German War Correspondent Hans-Joachim Volland indicates that Germany's armies are not escaping unscathed.

"Except for short rest periods, we are always under way from the front to hospitals in the Rumanian hinterland and back to the front," he quoted the chief surgeon of the train.

Volland said the surgeon told him it took six to eight days for the train to make its trip back loaded with wounded.

Table Released On Fair Retail Gasoline Prices

Guide to Motorists Includes 40 Cities in Eastern States.

By The Associated Press.

Leon Henderson, price administrator, made public at Washington last night a table of what he termed fair maximum retail prices for "regular" gasoline in 40 cities in the eastern states.

Henderson said the prices were designed to serve as a guide to motorists. Officials explained that it was not a mandatory price ceiling and that vendors were not under compulsion to observe it.

"They are the maximum prices which motorists should pay," Henderson said.

The retail prices range from 20.1 cents, including tax, in Manchester, N. H., to 16.5 cents a gallon in Washington. The prices, Henderson's office said, were based on the tank wagon price now being charged by major oil companies, state and federal taxes, and a uniform dealer margin of four cents a gallon.

Retail Price Increase

Henderson said that the list was made public because of "widespread" increases in retail prices.

Henderson added that he hoped motorists would "protest vigorously" against prices higher than those listed in the 40 cities. He invited persons who were charged more for gasoline in those cities to write to the office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, but officials did not disclose what action would be taken on any complaints.

Motorists traveling through the area should take a copy of the list with them, Henderson said.

For most of the cities the prices are those which prevailed August 1, officials said. The prices for Richmond, Philadelphia, New York City, Boston and most other Massachusetts cities are lower than those being charged by most dealers.

"In those cities motorists properly may expect service station operators to bring prices down to those listed and should urge the operators to do so," Henderson said.

Complete Listing.

The list of "fair maximum retail" service station prices included:

Portland, Me., 19.1 cents; Manchester, N. H., 20.1; Burlington, Vt., 19.7; Boston, Mass., 17.7; Worcester, Mass., 18.3; Springfield, Mass., 18.6; Cambridge, Mass., 17.7; Fall River, Mass., 17.8; New Bedford, Mass., 18.2; Somerville, Mass., 17.7; Lowell, Mass., 18.2; Pittsfield, Mass., 18.3.

Providence, R. I., 17.8; Hartford, Conn., 18.4; New Haven, 17.8; Bridgeport, 17.8; New York City, 18.9; Buffalo, 19; Rochester, 19.6; Syracuse, 19.3; Yonkers, 18.9; Albany, 18.7; Utica, 19.7.

Newark, N. J., 17.5; Jersey City, 17.5; Paterson, 17.5; Trenton, 17.5; Camden, 17.5; Elizabeth, 17.5.

Philadelphia, 18.5; Pittsburgh, 19; Scranton, 19; Erie, 19; Reading, 19.

Wilmington, Del., 18.5; Baltimore, 18.2; Washington, 16.5; Richmond, Va., 20; Norfolk, 19.75.

FLORIDA RATIONING ON SEABOARD BASIS

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Aug. 27. (AP)—Definite assurance from the acting federal petroleum co-ordinator that Florida gasoline rationing would be set up on a seasonal basis was announced tonight by Senator Claude Pepper and Governor Spessard L. Holland.

They also said they had assurances from Co-ordinator Ralph K. Davies, with whom they conferred by telephone that:

Florida's geographical location and proximity to oil-producing areas will be considered in setting the state's ration quota.

Filling stations at co-operative state farmers' markets will be rationed on the basis of produce season needs rather than any arbitrary basis.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Judge Etheridge granted a temporary injunction in the suit of the Tank Car Oil Corporation, involving its two stations, and set for hearing this morning the petition of 40 other independent dealers for a similar injunction.

Should the judges grant the additional injunctions today and continue in force the temporary injunction of the Tank Car Oil Company, the order would apply only to the filling stations named in the two petitions—but it was reported if these stations are granted freedom to operate all hours the other stations of the city probably will take similar action in self-protection or else the city law would not be enforced against any stations until further council consideration.

Filling station operators in the city were marking time in their plans, awaiting the word from the superior court.

Stanley Cites Figures.

Stanley cited figures in his contention that moving gasoline from the oil fields to the east is up to the owners of the vast majority of tank cars.

"Roughly, there are 143,000 railroad cars in the United States," he stated. "Of this number, approximately 8,000 are owned by the railroads, and the remainder belong to private car lines and oil companies."

He quoted J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, as saying there are 17,557 surplus tank cars which could move 200,000 barreis of oil daily to the east, and he pointed out Ralph Budd, transportation commissioner of the Office of Emergency Management, on August 12 had reported there were 7,354 tank cars immediately available.

2,178,870,000 Gallons.

Further, Stanley said, there were 2,178,870,000 gallons of gas consumed in six southeastern states during 1940 and asserted that 8,510 tank cars could have moved every drop of this fuel.

"In order for the railroads to take care of the movement of the gasoline above referred to, it would be necessary for these surplus idle railroad tank cars by proper authority to be assigned for use solely in this southeastern area, a situation which the railroads cannot control on account of the ownership of these tank cars," Stanley stated.

ATLANTA, GA., AUGUST 28, 1941.

Pierre Laval Shot!

France's Pierre Laval has been shot. He may die.

He was shot even as he sought to co-operate with Germany in putting down all opposition to putting France under the tender care of the Nazis who are holding France as closely and as harshly as they are holding Poland and other captured territories.

There will not be many to mourn Laval.

He was one of those whose contributions of political corruption brought France to disaster.

The French had a word for Laval. He was, they said, "malin." There is no exact translation of the word. It means a sort of within-the-law unscrupulousness, a shrewdness and a slyness which borders on the evil yet which never becomes entirely evil. That was the French estimate of him years ago.

They joked about him, saying he was even sly and clever enough to be born with a name which spells the same, backward or forwards. Laval was always to be found on the right side of any position. He was like a cat, always landing on his feet.

Laval was too much of a leftist for Poincaire during that gentleman's government. This sent him over to the right and in the next government, that of Tardieu, he was Minister of Labor. He was Prime Minister in 1931.

He was the first Prime Minister of France to visit Germany after the war. He was flattered by the tremendous reception given him.

It was not surprising that he turned to the Nazis after the defeat of last year. He was trying to land on his feet again and appear as a strong man in the new order. Petain did not like him and Petain, who was to surrender to Germany's demands, still was able to keep Laval out of the dominant position.

Even so, Laval continued to be the first man with the Germans.

That a Frenchman should have shot him is merely another illustration of the fact that the people of France see that Hitler is not inevitable; that he is not sure to win. Hope is flaming in all the conquered nations.

Laval, in his old age, hears nothing but curses from his own people. Their only sorrow will be that the assassin's aim was not better. It is a poor reward, even if the Germans do like him.

Watching Hitler is like old times to the vaudeville-lover who used to sit through the juggler's number to see him muff an Indian club.

In the rarefied air above 30,000 feet, bomber crews are unable to do the simplest calculations in arithmetic. This is also true of a congressman, lost on top of Mt. Debt.

To read a book, a Chicago woman holds it upside down. It is a possible solution of Gert Stein that had simply not occurred to us.

It's Come at Last

Chronic grumblers who complain that "the government never does anything right" must have chewed their fingernails in consternation when the news flashed from Washington that Uncle Sam had approved a simplified form for filing income tax returns for the millions of individuals who earn $3,000 or less a year. The new form was approved by the Senate Finance Committee. It had been requested by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau as a means of eliminating headaches for small wage earners, many of whom will be called upon to pay income taxes for the first time.

According to the news dispatches, the simplified form has its points. For one thing, it would eliminate the present complicated report of deductions for earned income, interest payments, contributions and other taxes. Instead, those earning $3,000 or less a year will merely compute their earnings, consult a graduated chart on the back of the return, and then fill in the amount of tax to be paid. The system has the added advantage also of saving much work for both the government and the taxpayers.

With this new wrinkle in the technicality of tallying the returns for Uncle Sam, all the grumblers have left to say is just the old, old saw: "Where's the money coming from to pay the taxes?"

County-City Consolidation

Announcement comes from Brunswick that some joint service of the city of Brunswick and Glynn county are to be performed which "may eventually mean the consolidation of all the services in the city aud county."

This is heartening. Other cities and counties might well begin the study of such services.

The movement to combine at least some functions of the city of Atlanta and Fulton county should not be permitted to die.

Every week, some problem faces Atlanta and in many instances county officials have to adopt the same measures as does Atlanta, whereas if we had just one government in Fulton, all action would be county-wide.

Activities outside the city have expanded so that one can scarcely tell where the city ends and the county begins. The county needs a police system just like the city; it needs fire protection just like the city; it needs a joint city-county school system.

All of these kinks could be straightened out by combining some of the functions of the city and county, and certainly with a well-managed government, taxes would be cut materially.

Brunswick and Glynn are to be commended for their move.

An explorer points out that African tribes solve food surpluses by eating them. It dispels a fond belief that they ate a third of the farmers.

Russia's Gold

Russia is the second largest gold-producing nation in the world.

That always comes as a surprise to those who think of Russia as a vast land where nothing much is produced except whiskers which the newspaper cartoonists like to draw.

It also explains why the President, in discussing the military mission to Russia, repeatedly has stressed that Russia can pay for what she gets.

It also explains why the economists glare at one another. There are those who say that since the British empire produces more gold than any other nation, with Russia second and the United States third, settlement of our national debts will be easy and simple once the war is won.

The three winning countries will have all the gold. Instead of currency having no base and no value, the nations will go back on the gold standard. They can value their currency at whatever gold content they wish. Since they will be the winners and since they will own practically all the gold in the world, payment of the national debts—so some of the economists say—will be easy and the public will never feel it because the dollar still will buy a dollar's worth. This theory makes still other economists scream in pain and announce the dollar will be worthless.

The only thing we really know is that Russia has gold, lots of it, and can pay for what she buys. Which is a bit unusual in these days.

One of the unnatural characteristics of cotton stockings, Dora, is that people will know you have them on.

Dangerous Professions

Danger is where you find it.

Georgia's steadily mounting highway deaths, accelerated by increased travel and use of the highway patrol hunting chicken and cattle thieves, were augmented by two Tuesday night.

It so happened the two men killed in an automobile crash were members of the famous Parachute Battalion at Fort Benning. Time after time they had made leaps from airplanes, depending on their quick-opening parachutes and their own skill, to bring them safely down. The average automobile driver, unfortunately, never considers he is in danger. He would never think of leaping from a plane, a mere 800 feet in the air, and depending on their parachute to open and bring them safely down.

Danger is where you find it.

We are no closer to war, the White House assures us—and it ought to know. Nevertheless, hamburger has turned up in Yakima, Wash., as defense steak.

After listening for a time to the interventionists and the isolationists, we have the confused sensation of one awakened to take his sleeping medicine.

Georgia Editors Say:

THOSE COMING TAXES.

(From The Walton Tribune—Monroe.)

The Tribune believes that the American people will be willing to make any reasonable sacrifice and to pay all the taxes they can in the effort to crush Hitlerism, re-enthrone justice and liberty in Europe and provide the necessary defenses in this country against foreign aggression. But The Tribune thinks a curb should be placed on the hysterical outpourings of the Washington propagandists who daily blab out some new tax threat and declare that "you haven't seen anything yet." After all, someone is going to have to pay the enormous bill incurred in providing national defense and aid to foreign nations, and we think that this manifest effort to frighten the people comes with poor judgment and grace.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

MILITARY POSSIBILITIES WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Informed administration quarters look on the Anglo-Russian occupation of Iran (Persia) as a master strategic move that has vast military possibilities in view of the turn war events have taken since the German invasion of Russia.

What the British and Russians have done assumes greater significance when the implications of the move are analyzed.

First, it blocks Hitler from executing boasted plans of the Nazis for sweeping around the Black Sea in an effort to close the Mediterranean by a direct attack on the Suez canal. By following this route, he would have accomplished the dual purpose of avoiding an invasion of Turkey, with its 2,000,000 armed men ready to resist him, and capturing the rich Persian oil fields, sorely needed for maintaining his mechanized divisions. Also it would have opened the way for an attack on British forces in India.

Second, it establishes what, in effect, will be a new war front against Hitler, as it enables the British to bring up a half million or more men now stationed in India and nearer British approaches to the Suez. Joining of these forces, sun-seasoned troops under the command of General Wavell, Britain's outstanding military leader, with Russian soldiers, should have a far-reaching effect on Soviet resistance and morale.

Third, the new Allied operation is regarded as vastly increasing the possibilities of Turkey being drawn into the war on the side of the British and Russians.

BRITISH FAR-SIGHTEDNESS Information of the British intelligence service, which has piled up a remarkable record of accuracy on war developments, has foreseen Hitler's designs on Turkey for some time. The only thing which is said to have prevented the Germans from taking a short cut through the Balkans to Suez before now was the 2,000,000 armed soldiers standing across their path in Turkey, plus the danger of an attack by Russia, then at peace with Hitler.

With the Russo-German war now on, and with Soviet resistance giving promise of extending over the winter months, there is less to keep the Turks out of the conflict. But whether they want to keep out or not, the possibility of them being drawn in by a direct German attack is not written off by our governmental observers who are kept constantly informed on the situation.

In the light of what has occurred in the occupation of Persia, the British are now credited with great far-sightedness in sending General Wavell to India earlier in the year, about the time Germans and Italians recaptured most of the area gained by Wavell's forces in the sensational thrust through Axis-held regions of Egypt and Libya.

At the time there was widespread speculation over reports that General Wavell had been demoted. Sending him away to India, then far removed from the actual scene of conflict, didn't seem to make sense in view of his reputation as the best equipped military figure the British had.

A BARRIER TO SUEZ Now it would appear that the British knew exactly what they were about, that they anticipated subsequent events which extended the war to Russia, with the necessity for British armed forces in India being prepared for such a contingency. Prime Minister Churchill is known to have warned the Russians of Hitler's plans to attack them as far back as last winter. He so confided to Wendell L. Willkie and Harry Hopkins when they went to London to consult with him in January. President Roosevelt was informed through the same sources then also.

In any event, General Wavell was sent to India for a mission, it is now revealed. As a result of his going, he now has under his command in that outpost of the British Empire more than a half million well-equipped Indian troops. It is reported that he will have still another equal force of India's teeming millions available for use this fall.

The importance of such an army cannot be overemphasized, our officials believe. It not only would serve to defeat Hitler's aims for gaining the valuable oil reserves to be found in Persia, but offers a barrier to his route to the Suez, and, not the least, provides a strong force for an offensive action against the Germans in collaboration with the Russians.

The British-Russian operation was hastened by the Nazi gains in the Ukraine in the direction of the Persian frontier along the Caucasus. They acted after repeated warnings to the Persian government against the infiltration of German "specialists," whom the British identified as Fifth Columnists sent ahead to prepare the way for later co-operation with the Nazi army.

It is too early to say what the final effect of the move will be, but some of our officials think it has momentous possibilities.

THE WORLD TODAY

By COLONEL FREDERICK PALMER

LESSONS FROM THE SKIES WASHINGTON.—Overseas criticism has been directed at our Army Curtiss-Wright P-40 fighter (pursuit) plane, called Tomahawk by the British. Our early P-40—not the P-40D—belongs to the same period of design as the early German Messerschmitt and the British Hurricanes and Spitfires. Doubtless it is the late model P-40Ds which are in Iceland.

Our P-40 and the Messerschmitt were built for longer range than the Hurricanes and Spitfires, which sacrificed range for quick interceptor ascent and maneuverability in short bursts of speed against bomber raids over Britain.

We know how British fighter planes, supremely suited as they were for home insular defense, were considerably handicapped in meeting the problem of longer distances in Africa, and cruelly and disastrously so in the Cretan campaign.

Time was then seen by the Allies as assuring their victory behind the Maginot line and the English channel. It was a case of short range on the western front, as well as in insular defense, when not yet a single German bomb had been dropped on London or Paris.

After Dunkerque our air corps and plants were under pressure of the tremendous expansion program. It took a year to tool up after the designs for a new type were ready. There was a call to freeze types for prompt mass production. Lessons were coming hot from the skies, in the amazing, fluid progress of war aviation and the pilots' hit-and-miss, split-second gamble with death.

CONFLICTING VIEWS OF PILOTS British designers were trying to harmonize the conflicting views of pilots. They were on the scene, with larger productive capacity.

Britain's was the dire need in her mortal crisis. The demand was to make such adjustments in improving our present types as were practicable without the delay of getting a new type into production. At first we had not the requisite fine sheet armor, which the British had. Construction was so modified they could put it on. Gun power was increased to meet the resistance of the armor of German bombers, with their fore and aft turrets. Next the pilots were calling for "cannon" caliber.

Now we hear of comparisons actually being made between the early Curtiss P-40 and the great new British Beau-Fighter. This is like comparing an automobile of the 1910 model with one of the 1941 model. Beau-Fighter is described as having four "cannon," six Browning (American) machineguns, and long range. This cannon is actually only 20-mm. caliber, which is a big gun for the air at that. It is our new P-40D which should be compared with Beau-Fighter. P-40D has a high ceiling, unsurpassed speed and three .50-caliber machine guns in either wing, and is now being sent abroad in quantity.

OBSOLESCENT TYPES STILL USEFUL A fairer comparison with Beau-Fighter is a fighter with 37-mm. cannon, about one-and-a-half inch, which we shall soon have in production. Meanwhile I understand that some pilots have come to the conclusion that the value of cannon for fighters has been overestimated.

Very pertinent is the question of how many Beau-Fighters are coming weekly, or how many of our new cannon fighters will come weekly, off the assembly lines. If they make other types obsolescent, aren't the other types to be employed?

An obsolescent type is better than no plane. German obsolescent types have been employed for missions for which they were suited. They had their part in the conquest of France, in the Luftwaffe raids over Britain, and now in Russia.

Gossip also indulges in criticism of our Boeing B-17 bombers as being under-armed and under-armored, with too low a ceiling. It has flown across the Atlantic with a ceiling up to 36,000 feet and arrived with 500 gallons of gas in reserve. With an actual ceiling of 45,000 feet, it is armored with bow and tail turrets, unsurpassed in type. But it would be unfair to British aviation to compare it with an early British bomber type which has a ceiling of 15,000 feet.

Now to revert to the reasons for ferrying ground crews and spare parts to the Middle East. There, in the heat and sand, the Germans have had the same mechanical and pilot troubles as the British.

Say a crated American plane arrives in Egypt. British ground crews try to follow directions about mechanism with which they are unfamiliar. Under pressure of stiff conflict, a pilot takes the plane up before he is familiar with it. The result is that he may not think very highly of the American plane.

In the case of the more complicated bomber the problem is more trying. There was long delay in getting a Boeing into action after it arrived in Britain. As a result, hundreds of RAF pilots are now in America learning how to handle our planes.

Our navy has held fast to its planes. The only planes it has turned over to the British are of the Catalina scout type, one of which spotted the Bismarck in her run for the refuge of the harbor of Brest. Our Navy airmen pioneered in torpedo-carrying planes, and it was one of the excellent improved British type which ruptured the Bismarck's steering geer.

Our Army and Navy were pioneering with dive bombers long before we ever heard of the German Stukas. It seems the Nazis got the idea from us.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

The opinions expressed by Mr. Pegler in this column are his own and do not necessarily represent the opinion of The Atlanta Constitution.

Obvious Conspiracy NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—I go back to the preaching of William Green, the president of the American Federation of Labor, and call attention to his repeated demands that the law-enforcement agencies of the national, state and local governments proceed vigorously against crooks in the unions under his jurisdiction. I shall now reveal the hypocrisy of this position in presenting for your study an obvious conspiracy to mock the authority of the government of the United States from which unions of the AFL derive a special license to persecute and rob millions of workers and to extort money from employing companies whose ownership represents the investments of millions of citizens.

As most of us know, George Browne, the gangster president of the stage and movie employers' craft unions, and Willie Bioff, his criminal colleague in the same racket, are under indictment here charged with extorting $550,000 from the very employers with whom they carried on negotiations ostensibly in behalf of the workers. This union is a development of the old Capone-Nitti mob of bootleggers, murderers and free-style criminals, but, nevertheless, its general counsel is Joe Padway, who is also general counsel of the AFL in Washington and one of Green's confidential associates.

Both Green and Padway extolled Browne when the fact that he was a common Chicago gangster was well known and Meyer Lewis, who was Green's regional agent on the Pacific coast, went so far as to send an official vote of confidence to Bioff when that evil parasite was entering jail to serve time for living on the earnings of a stable of streetwalkers.

Trial Postponed Browne and Bioff were to have gone to trial in the federal court on August 18, but the government had to ask for a postponement until September 8 because the FBI had been unable to find Nick Circella, alias Dean, a stickup man and habitual criminal of the Chicago area who occupies, by Browne's appointment, a position parallel to that of Bioff. Dean is a well-known dive-keeper in Chicago, operating a low but pretentious dump called the Colony Club, which is frequented by all the best drunkards of the gold coast and the corn belt. His ownership of the joint is masked because his criminal record disqualifies him as a licensee, but he is the head man, nevertheless. And lest it be thought that I am speaking from hearsay in describing this joint as a joint, I may say that I, personally, have been solicited by a captain of waiters there on behalf of the prostitutes who sit for company in the shadows and that I have seen the tables in the playroom where the gambling is done when the heat is off.

The Colony Club is a dump under criminal ownership and assurance of this fact may impart a special thrill to the radio audience the next time the announcer's mooing notes advise the unseen multitude that they are listening to music by one of Jimmy Petrillo's union orchestras from the beautiful and exclusive Colony Club on Chicago's famous Gold Coast.

On the Lam This Circella, or Dean, has been wanted as a witness in the trial of Browne and Bioff and without his testimony the case might be lost, but he has disappeared from his dump and from all his familiar underworld hangouts and the FBI has been unable to find him. It is not customary for Circella, or Dean, to disappear at this time of the year and he usually can be found without difficulty at any season, either in Chicago or with the rest of the criminal scum in Miami, Fla., during the hibernating period of the union racketeers, such as Umbrella Mike Boyle, Browne and Max Pollack, alias Caldwell, lately caught robbing a clerk's union under an AFL charter.

Candidly, Circella is on the lam and yet William Green, with a membership of 4,000,000, according to his claim, has made no appeal to his organization to dig up key witnesses in the prosecution of men charged with preying on labor and thus discrediting the union cause. I specifically refrain from charging Green with participation in the conspiracy, but submit, nevertheless, that the existence of a conspiracy among Browne, Bioff and Dean, to hamper a prosecutor performing his duty according to Green's oft-repeated demands, is too apparent to permit of any doubt.

Neither am I prepared to believe that the FBI is exerting itself fully, because this failure does not consist with the reputation of the FBI or with J. Edgar Hoover's boastful personal and departmental publicity. The Department of Justice is seriously infected with politics and there are political interests which would suffer serious embarrassment if Dean were turned up and the whole story was told of the union relations and the politics of the movie industry.

That consideration aside, however, we still have Green exhorting prosecutors to punish union racketeers, while a notorious, powerful criminal holding official credentials from one of his unions is hidden lest he be forced to reveal the vicious history of the union governed by Gangster Browne, who sits with Green as a member of the executive council of the AFL.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

NOW, BACK IN '62 There isn't much new under the sun, just as the preacher said in one of those books of the Bible, Ecclesiastes.

I was talking the other night with a dear sweet soul, as we say, and she was bemoaning the fact that our Army's morale was suffering and there was fear some desertions might ensue.

I didn't think so, and I know that most of the talk around Army camps is just talk because there isn't enough work and not enough equipment with which to work. England is getting so much we've been a little slow at our own camps. The morale will be all right.

This dear sweet soul went on to say she was sure the New Deal or Mr. Roosevelt or something new and iniquitous was getting into our boys, because she knew that in all the glorious history of our own War Between the States there was none of our boys who deserted. Or wanted to.

Now, I agree that the "elan" of the Confederate army was, for the most of the war, perhaps the finest the world has ever seen. There was in that army, as Stephen Vincent Benet said:

"So with you—and the legend has made a stainless host
Out of the dusty columns of footsore men
Who found life sweet and didn't want to be killed,
Grumbled at officers, grumbled at governments.
That stainless host you were not . . .
You cursed the war and the food—and went on until the end.
And yet there was something in you that matched that fable."

There was, too. But the dear, sweet soul set me to thinking and to reading. I remembered that in the winter of 1862 the morale of the Army of the South was never lower. There were desertions and there was grumbling and letters home about the poor officers, the food and no recreation.

A BIT OF STUDY In August 7, 1862, Horace Greeley wrote a letter to Charles Sumner, from his office of the Tribune:

"My Dear Sir:

"Do you remember that old theological book containing this:

"'Chapter I. Hell.

"Well, that gives a hint of the way Old Abe ought to be talked to in this crisis of the nation's destiny.

"Still, I comprehend the wisdom of not breaking with the Chief of the Republic in this hour of fiery trial, and shall respect it. Only you must do all his puffing, for I can't help you. He's a bad stick.

"Yours, Horace Greeley."

There was bad morale in North and South. There were desertions and complaints. All this, plus the talk of the dear, sweet soul, started me in to a bit of reading. There are plenty of notes on desertions and morale. I thought that today I might start with Southern morale and tomorrow get around to treating the Yankee morale. It was bad, too. Very bad.

It is interesting to note that in 1862 the Confederate morale was very low. Yet, by spring, it was to sweep upward, and that homesick, low-spirited army was to shatter the Yankees in early '63. Its greatest victories came that spring.

In that spring Lieutenant Colonel Fremantle, of the British Coldstream Guards, spent three months in the Confederacy and left, praising their morale and their spirit. He thought they'd win.

Even in the winter of '64, Joe Johnston was to take a sick army at Dalton and bring it back to great heights of morale by work and by spirit.

The draft, or selective service act of that time, was received with consternation and riots. There were many who committed suicide.

SOUTHERN DESERTIONS In the summer of '63 came defeats. Grant had won at Vicksburg. Lee had failed at Gettysburg, and that was the high tide of the Confederacy, although none knew it then. Chickamauga had been fought and lost.

The number of deserters was so large that General Lee and President Davis issued appeals and pardons to all who would return. Davis went so far as to say, "If all now absent return to ranks, you will be equal in numbers to the invaders."

It was not that these Southerners were deserters at heart—not all, at any rate. Many of them were farm boys or men. They had had letters saying that no one was there to put in a crop, or that "Pa" was sick and likely to die. They just went home and stayed to help out. Others had enlisted for a period and when that was up refused to go back. Others went home to "see the womenfolks was all right."

We even had our appeasers in the South. Governor Joe Brown, of Georgia, wrote, "There seems to have settled upon the minds of our people a sort of feeling of despondency which is stimulated by the constant croaking of a class of speculators who have made money and who are preparing to curry favor with Lincoln . . ."

(Just as today there are some who would curry favor with Hitler.)

Thousands of deserters in Alabama fought off cavalry sent to arrest them. In every Southern state there always was this trouble. Morale was up and down.

Army morale today is something to worry about, but it is not at all the problem it has been in our wars of the past.

Tomorrow I think I will get around to the Yankees. They used to parade their deserters up and down Pennsylvania avenue. They had scads of them and their morale was often lower than that of the Confederate armies.

The Acid Test Will Always Tell Whether It Is Gold or Brass

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

When scientists are trying to solve a new problem, with no known rule or test or standard to guide them, they must proceed by the elemental process of trial and error. But if there is a proven and infallible test by which to check each step, they can avoid aimless experimenting.

In time of war there is a simple test by which to prove the patriot. The question is not where he was born, or whether he displays a flag, or how loyally he speaks, but whether he helps his country.

So now there is a simple test by which to check the sanity and necessity of almost every effort and proposal made by the government.

It is a test that should stop all arguments among reasonable people, for once it is used to measure the merit of any assertion or contention or plan, there is nothing more to be said.

The test is in the form of a question: "Is our country in danger?"

Should soldiers be kept in service?

How can anybody know until he first determines whether our country is in danger?

If it is not, we have no need of an army. If it is, it would be ruinous folly to weaken our defense force.

Should our Navy be used to help Britain save Singapore and the Netherlands East Indies? The answer is in the question: Is our country in danger?

If not—if Japan can seize the key to Asia and the Pacific and control our source of tin, rubber and other necessities without endangering us, there is no reason to interfere. But if our country is in danger, the Navy should act. That's what it is for.

Should we concentrate all our energies on defense work, and quit everything that interferes with it? Should we find a way to prevent strikes? Should we take Martinique, the Azores, the Cape Verde islands and Dakar rather than let Hitler get them?

The answer in every case is the same: Is our country in danger?

If we think it is not in danger, why do we permit such burdensome taxes, such piling up of debt, such vast disruption of our ordinary way of life?

If it is in danger, why do we hesitate to do everything possible to make it safe?

OFF THE RECORD—By Ed Reed

"That hostess hasn't had a dance all evening—I'm asking for volunteers, men!"

Dudley Glass

Moving Day—and Labor Day—and Isn't It Awful?

Moving time is just around the corner. But not for me, praise de Lawd, unless the mortgage company gets tough.

I'd sure hate to tackle the task of superintending the moving of our household treasures. When you've lived for 15 years in a house with an attic and a basement and a flock of rooms you just naturally accumulate things. Of sentimental value if of nothing else.

Mark Twain was the most fortunate of movers. Once when he was a young man a woman acquaintance observed him strolling up the street with a cigar box under his arm.

"Sam," she asked, "I know your circumstances. How can you afford to buy cigars by the box?"

"My dear lady," responded young Mr. Clemens, "this box is not full of cigars. It contains all my household effects. I'm moving."

Luckily, not everyone who moves does it on September 1. He couldn't this year, because that's Labor Day, when no good citizen labors.

Usually, if this annual checker game can be worked out, they can start about now—and they have.

It depends upon whether the Joneses will move out early so the Smiths can move into the Joneses' abandoned quarters. Sometimes the Joneses discover, all too late, that the Robinsons didn't move out of the house the Joneses want. And the Smiths' first van load of furniture, including a parrot in a cage, has arrived. So the Joneses and the Smiths, like the lion and the lamb, have to lie down together for the night, snatching sleep on daybeds and davenports and rugs. Which may be the beginning of a beautiful friendship. But the odds are 95 to 5 against.

Still Far Apart

Groups of friends at a buffet supper a few evenings ago were discussing moving.

"We've taken a place on Jimsonweed drive, just a block north of you," cooed one young matron. If you can coo a sentence like that, which I haven't tried.

"Why, darling," returned her friend. "If we'd only known! We're moving to that lovely new subdivision, Hillbilly Heights—which must be at least 11 miles away."

Number of younger folk have consulted old Uncle Dudley about the best way to get moved. He hadn't had much experience, but his advice is:

"Engage a reputable van company. Give the boss the old address and the new—and all the keys.

"And then get into your car and take a trip to the beach and when you come back you'll find all your junk in your new joint.

"It won't be where you want it and a couple of goldfish may have perished and you'll never find that fourth leg of the coffee table.

"But all your suffering will come at once and in a couple of days you'll be used to it.

"The man who cut off his puppy's tail a half-inch at a time, to reduce suffering, had a fine idea. But it was tough on the puppy.

"So turn over the keys and write a check and go far away, and come home and take it all in one big dose. By this system you'll get mad only once."

That Cotton Problem

Some superwise economist has made a suggestion he thinks will boost sales of cotton to an enormous degree.

Pass a law, he suggests, or have the President issue an order, requiring all women to wear skirts down to the ankles.

"The joker in that," he explains, "is if the ladies can't show their legs they'll quit clamoring for silk stockings and wear cotton."

He has got something there. Though this column thinks the nation should not totally sacrifice natural scenery for some sordid utilitarian purpose.

Well-dressed swindler is reporting to be working on Atlanta women by calling at homes where rooms are offered for rent, taking a room for a month, offering to pay in advance and presenting a check for $60, asking for the change. He gets it—and doesn't come back. But the check does.

But it strikes me that this chap earns his profits by the shoe leather he wears down and the door bells he rings. How many housewives ever have enough real cash money on hand to make change like that?

Wages of Sin

Editor Jack Hilton, of the Banks County Journal, points out the penalty of intemperance:

"The big peach crop stuck an idea in some of the bootleggers' heads. They thought that naturally the public would think much peach brandy would be made. So bootleggers mixed peach juice and other ingredients with sugar liquor and sell it for peach brandy. We have seen several of the boys next morning after they had filled their bellies with the stuff the night before, and they looked as though they had been drug through hell backwards.

"One of our farmer friends, whose farm had run down because he had rather sit than stand, kept going to our erosion man, Mr. Crittenton, and ask him what was the best thing to do for the run-down farm. Yesterday he asked Crit was the first thing he should do to start improving his farm. Well, said Crit, the first thing to do for that farm is to get a big handful of sandspurs and place them in the seat of your pants."

Great Power Unit Is Ready To Go on Line

Huge Plant Atkinson Completed Far Ahead of Schedule.

By HAROLD MARTIN.

With the flick of a switch, a chunky, dark-haired man named Jake Benziger some day soon is going to harness 100,000 new horses of power to the five million horses now pulling the great electrical system that serves the south.

There won't be any fanfare about it. No speeches, no photographers, no celebration.

He'll just stand there a minute, before a control board, his eyes flickering over a mass of dials and gauges and winking lights. He'll be a little nervous, and his palms will sweat a little for it takes some doing to hitch 100,000 plunging horses in tandem with the 5,000,000 others that are already running away, without throwing things out of tempo somewhere along the line.

He knows that his mammoth new turbine is rolling smoothly at 1,800 revolutions a minute, its blades whirling under the push of steam superheated to 725 degrees, at a pressure of 450 pounds to the square inch.

Then he will turn a little knob, slowly, and watch the face of a dial where a needle jumps and quivers and finally holds steady as he brings the big turbo-generator into synchronization with all the other generators along the line.

100,000 Horses.

And then, sweating a little, he will throw a switch and the 100,000 horses quivering beneath his hand will fall smoothly into step and another 60,000 kilowatts an hour will go surging out over the wires to turn the wheels and light the homes of Georgia.

If nothing blows, if the great generator whines on without a break, he will pull a handkerchief from his pocket and wipe his wet palms with it and say to the control room gang standing around, "Well boys, she's on the line."

And thus, prosaically, the mammoth second unit of the Georgia Power Company Plant Atkinson will go into production sometime around the first of September—an undramatic ending to as dramatic a job of getting a big job done in a hurry as the annals of industry can show.

If every man along the line has done his job, if every piece of steel and wire and concrete is flawless and can stand the great heats and pressures it's supposed to stand, if the new plant is in perfect synchronization with other plants along the line, it's just a breeze.

Chance for Error

But if somebody has bobbled, if Superintendent Jake Benziger throws that switch a fraction of a second too late, or too soon, if somewhere a boiler tube blows, or a gasket tears out, or any one of a million tragic things that can happen does happen, then there's trouble. It may be bad enough to wreck nearly a million dollars worth of fine machinery, as delicately adjusted as a watch. It may be trivial, merely blowing some weak spot down the line when the great surge comes as the new generator goes on.

In peacetime you don't have to hurry so much, and worry so much. When you build a plant like Atkinson, you build it slowly, and you know, as every step in the big job is done, that it's been done right. You take things easy, test as you go, and when all is done you sort of take the whole thing on a shakedown cruise—testing every pump and gauge and switch and belt and pipe. And, about a year and a half or two years after you started, you are ready to go.

You can't do that in wartime—in times of emergency—like today, when your hydro-electric plants are able to turn out only half their normal output and defense industries are demanding one-fourth more power than in normal times.

Build in a Hurry

You have to build in a hurry, and pray you're right, working night and day, tirelessly inspecting and testing as you go but never having the time to be as sure as you want to be when millions of dollars—and keeping the wheels of defense industry turning—depend upon your being right.

And in about thirteen months, instead of a year a half or two years, after many an engineer has had his hair turn gray, after construction men have sworn and beat their chests, after experts in a dozen fields have sweated and worked themselves into a frenzy, you are ready to go, or hope you are.

You try to be sure but you never can be until that last quiet, dramatic moment when the switch is thrown. That's like a parachute jump. You can do it but once. It's like rolling the dice with a million dollars riding on the throw.

And that's the way it's been at Plant Atkinson, nearly ready now after a year of struggling to get the materials from plants that couldn't turn out the stuff fast enough. After a year of shepherding freight cars of pipe, or wire, or brick or steel or what-not, all the way from Potomac yards to Atlanta.

Last Car Arrives.

The last car came in yesterday—a car of the fine steel pipe that can stand the pressures of superheated steam. The rest is just fitting things together, synchronizing within machinery that weighs 50 tons minute parts that must work to tolerances of one one-thousandth of an inch. The hard part is over.

A great electric power plant is a simple thing, in principle. You just heat water into steam and the steam turns a turbine and the turbine turns a generator and the generator makes the juice and you put it on the line and let it ride to do the work of the world from heating the baby's bottle to electro-welding a battleship.

But a man like W. E. Mitchell, vice-president and general manager of the power company, or J. M. Oliver, the operations head, or Ben Sinclair, the production chief, can tell you it isn't so simple.

Just start with the coal. You have to have a million dollars' worth of it on hand, 200,000 tons in all. Just as a protection against John L. Lewis or transportation shortages or any one of a dozen things that might affect your source of supply.

Then you have to grind it into a powder, finer than talcum powder, so that when you blow it into the furnace, mixed just right with hot air, it burns in such a way you get every ounce of heat energy out of it that you can.

Gas Enough for City.

And just in case coal prices rise, or something happens, you have to be equipped to burn gas, too, 20,000,000 cubic feet of it a day—more than all the city of Atlanta put together uses.

Then take the water. Just any old water won't do. You take the red, polluted water of the Chattahoochee and you distill it until it's purer than the water you drink at home, for the insides of a modern steam boiler are more sensitive than the tummy of an infant. Water with minerals in it leaves scale on the tubes, and scale on the tubes causes overheating and overheating will cause a tube to blow and when it does you're sunk.

You've got to heat that water into steam, and by that don't think it means the steam that sings merrily from the spout of a teakettle. Steam for big jobs must be superheated steam, dry as a bone and hot as—well, hot.

Then you have to condense that steam into water again and to do this you have to suck five million gallons of water out of the muddy Chattahoochee and pass it through the condenser to condense this steam. Which is more water than the whole city of Atlanta uses in a day. And you have to strain this water, and get all the trash out of it, and you'd be surprised what the city of Atlanta dumps into the water of the Chattahoochee.

Ten-Story Firebox.

You have to have a firebox as high as a 10-story building, built of brick that will stand a heat of 2,600 degrees. And you have to have a turbine huge as a freight engine and as delicately balanced and adjusted as a fine watch.

You have to link all these things together with pipe of the finest steel, miles and miles of it, so put together there's no leaks anywhere. And you have to have experts like Benziger, or R. S. Causey, the boiler man, or Joe Lanson, the turbine boss, to run it all, or lack of knowledge or carelessness will tear the whole thing to pieces.

If you've got all this, and have thrown it together in half the time it usually takes, and it does the job, you can settle back for a minute to feel goo about yourself. For you've done what Uncle Sam has asked for—you've gone "all-out." You've done your job for national defense.

Coal Consumer Agents to Grant InterviewsHere

Information on Prices Will Be Obtained September 2-3.

In an effort to obtain last-minute information on coal prices from Georgia bituminous coal consumers and retailers, representatives from the Bituminous Coal Consumers' Council will be in Atlanta September 2 and 3, Francis F. Shurling, state director of the office of government reports, announced yesterday.

The representatives will be available at 404 Candler building to interview coal consumers and retailers, Shurling said.

Luther Harr, Bituminous Coal Consumers' Council has petitioned the Bituminous Coal Division of the Department of the Interior, to set a ceiling on bituminous coal prices which have risen in varying amounts in the past few months. A hearing on the petition has been scheduled for September 9, in Washington, and representatives of Harr's office are here to gather information on prevailing prices for the hearing, Shurling said.

Intellectual Keeps Wits Best In Blitz---Dorothy Thompson

Professional Man in Middle Class Rated Highest in Ability To Stay Cool and Think While Being Bombarded.

This is the last of a series of articles by Miss Thompson, describing British defense activity and the relationship between management and labor in the Midlands and the reactions of persons to the blitz.

By DOROTHY THOMPSON.

LONDON—(By Wireless)—My own technique in reporting is to ask the same question of as many different sorts of people as I can reach and then see what the sum of the answers is. So I have asked a question which is interesting either from a social, military, biological or psychological viewpoint:

What sort of person stands up best in the blitz? Who runs to cover and who doesn't? Who thinks first of the other fellow and who thinks first of himself? Who suffers a nervous collapse and who emerges cool and smiling?

There is no doubt about the answer. The replies have been unanimous. Persons who have shown the most cool-headedness, swiftness in action in an emergency and sheer courage are that long-despised middle class.

The so-called "Maidenhead refugees," those who have gotten out of it all by evacuating themselves to pleasant places in the country far from military objectives and near good inns and golf courses have been the well-to-do.

The very poor often have gone to pieces, at least for the moment. But men and women from five-room flats and seven-room houses have been cool, nonchalant heroes.

Professions Rank High.

Which middle-class occupations have shown the highest standard of behavior?

Again the answer is unanimous—the free professions. Curiously, perhaps astonishingly, the intellectuals. Doctors, lawyers, school teachers, pastors, engineers, dentists, journalists, writers, artists and actors—they are far above the small or large businessmen; they and skilled workers—railroad men, skilled mechanics, machine-tool makers and operators.

Persons whom their friends always have regarded as neurotics, highly-strung, nervous ladies, gentlemen with tendencies to develop stomach ulcers, get gold stars for blitz behavior.

Race doesn't count. The record is the same for Englishmen and for the French, Dutch, Scandinavian, Belgian and Jewish refugees.

It is the journalist, dentist or engineer in the block who gets out first and stands exposed on the roof of a building, watching a fire, doses incendiary bombs or mans ambulances (women do the same) and then wisecracks through the horror of the blitz.

The behavior of everybody in the islands, even though they have been a hell on earth, is above praise.

But the supers are boys and girls who are earning their living by their brains. Why?

Concentrated Effort.

Well, first of all they are accustomed to concentrated intellectual effort, and the emergency calls it forth.

Second, they are persons accustomed to objective thinking, and apparently that has some effect on character. Their minds look out rather than in.

Third, they have had an education that has induced certain standards of behavior.

Fourth, and despite a tendency to dyspepsia and taut nerves, they apparently have good health, for statistics show they live long.

Fifth, they belong to occupations in which the individual has to think for himself.

Sixth, they have an intellectual curiosity which makes even the most terrible experience interesting. They are the only persons who get a sort of grim, intellectual or artistic pleasure out of the weird phenomenon.

The stock of the intellectual, therefore, is going up in England, and this perhaps augurs a happier, more intelligent time to come.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

"TAKE ME HOME."

Dr. Arch C. Cree has come home, and thereby hangs a tale of more than ordinary interest. Stricken seriously ill in New York, where he had gone to preach at Calvary Baptist church, Dr. Cree was rushed to one of the leading hospitals of the country, and there, for several days, his life was sdefinitely in the balance. His children were summoned, and they counted the hours anxiously. Attended by nationally-famous heart specialists, Dr. Cree, in his accustomed Scotch courage, fought through until, one morning when the chief doctor tipped into his room, he smiled, and said:

"Doctor, you have not got to the bottom of my trouble."

"What do you mean?" the doctor inquired, encouraged by the smile but baffled by the remark of Dr. Cree.

"I've stood about as much of you blank Yankees as I can. I'm homesick. I want to go to Georgia. Can't you let them take me home?"

And now both men were smiling, and the wise heart specialist knew that his patient was infinitely better. Yes, that could be worked out. And within a few days one of the daughters was on the way to Atlanta with her happy father. The New York doctor sent the Atlanta doctor the history of the case, and Dr. Cree is now convalescing at the Georgia Baptist hospital.

"I want to say for those doctors in New York that they could not have been kinder to any man than they were to me. They brought the best modern skill, and withal, a personal touch that I shall never forget," said Dr. Cree the other afternoon. And for that skill and kindness Dr. Cree's countless friends throughout the south are deeply grateful.

This man Cree has forever endeared himself to the half million white Baptists in Georgia. Born in Innerleithem, Peebleshire, Scotland, March 9, 1872, his father moved to the States when the boy was still quite young, settling on a farm near Henderson, N. C. The boy went to Wake Forest College, and then to the Southern Baptist Seminary, and after pastorates in South Carolina, Kentucky and Tennessee, Dr. Cree accepted the call to the First Baptist church at Moultrie, in 1909. That was the beginning of his Georgia life. In 1812 he became secretary of enlistment with the Home Mission Board, and that brought him to Atlanta. In 1915 he accepted the secretaryship of the Georgia Baptist convention, in which position of outstanding leadership he continued until 1930, when he accepted the pastorate of the First Baptist church, Salisbury, N. C., where he continued until the end of 1940, when he retired from active duty. Among the many features of his achievement as secretary in Georgia was the building of the surgical building of the Baptist hospital, in which building he is now recuperating.

Georgia Baptists will ever cherish the fact that Dr. Cree said to that Yankee doctor: "I want to go home in Georgia." He has lived in Georgia longer than in any other political division of the earth, and Georgians rejoice to think that it is "home" to this beloved servant of God. We pray that it may be the Father's good will to let him live amongst us yet many years.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Take as directed. Effective in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. 10¢ and 25¢.

Yates, Dahlbender Lose in First Round of National Amateur

All in The Game

BY JACK TROY

The Winners It's a pretty hazardous occupation, like a Thanksgiving turkey sticking its neck out, to attempt to determine the probable football winners in each section of the country.

This task has been attempted by a number of noted writers in Street and Smith's excellent football Year Book now on sale on all newsstands, and the results are interesting.

The general round-up story is done by the Herald Tribune's Stanley Woodward, than whom there is no keener judge in the writing fraternity.

By sections, Woodward selects the following teams:

East—Fordham; middle west—Minnesota; Missouri valley—Nebraska; Rocky Mountain—Utah; far west—Stanford; southwest—Texas; south—Duke.

As the writer on the southern end of the Year Book, I am forced to agree with Mr. Woodward's selection of Duke, for the Blue Devils were the choice of this writer to come through.

If Duke hurdles Tennessee in an early October clash at Durham, Wallace Wade's behemoths may be as hard to stop as a runaway elephant.

In the Southeastern Conference the odds are against Alabama, Tennessee, Ole Miss and all the rest coming through unbeaten. Most of them are playing consistent schedules, and with the material more evenly distributed, there is hardly a chance for domination by any one team.

And with the draft situation unsettled as it is, the general outlook may prove as uncertain as the bounce of the ball with which the game is played.

Tempest Over Tepo In reading about Fordham's prospects, there is one pasage that will interest Georgia coaches. It says, "Gerge Tepo, a newcomer, can easily prove to be a better pass-catcher than anything at Fordham in recent history."

Former Georgia backfield coach, Jimmy Crowley, now head man of the Rams of Rose Hill, made more than the old college try in luring Tepo away from Georgia.

Crowley was determined to have the fleet six-footer. He said as much a couple of years ago passing through en route to New Orleans.

Georgia had him for a while and when he left after spring practice, two springs ago, he said he was likely to quit the game and go to work. And now he bobs up as one of the great Fordham prospects.

So when the east talks of "snatching," let the east be reminded of Tepo. He certainly can run that end-around, too, if anybody should ask you.

Maybe Socially Why does everybody still think Lou Nova and Joe Louis have met before somewhere? If they did, it was in another world. Or else socially. Never have they been in a ring together—not even as sparring partners.

The reason Mike Jacobs gave for matching Nova and Louis, instead of giving Billy Conn the return

Dick Chapman, John Goodman Also Defeated

Upsets Numerous on First Day; Both Atlantans Lose by 2 and 1.

By BILL BONI.

OMAHA, Aug. 27.—(AP)—The first day of match play in the National Amateur golf championship has come to be known to the trade as "Black Wednesday." Black, they say, has no shadings.

But it was something blacker than a black Wednesday storm that swept the Omaha Field Club course today and put out of the 45th tournament four former champions and all but a handful of players of established reputation.

In the course of two rounds of 18-hole matches, which reduced the field from 64 to 16, the following stars were shunted to the sidelines:

FIRST-ROUND CASUALTIES.

In the first round—Dick Chapman, winner last year but beaten decisively by Lou Jennings, a 24-year-old comer from Portland, Ore.; Johnny Fischer, of Cincinnati, 1936 champion; Johnny Goodman, who had been expected to go far on his home course but went only 20 holes; Mario Gonzalez, likable Brazilian youngster who was the only foreign entry and had looked like a real contender, and Charlie Yates, the Georgia soldier boy, who won the British Amateur in 1939.

In the second round—Skip Alexander, the qualifying-round leader from Burlington, N. C.; Wilford Wehrle, a semi-finalist in 1940; Art Doering, who went to the same round the year before; Rodney Bliss, another highly rated Omahan, and Freddy Haas Jr., the string-bean former Walker cupper from New Orleans.

With form taking such a tremendous beating, there were only four among the 16 survivors who have well-established golfing reputations.

Marvin (Bud) Ward, of Spokane, Wash., whose chances of repeating his 1939 victory look better and better, won at 7 and 6 over Alex Welsh, of Rockford, Ill., and then was taken to the 17th for a 2 and 1 triumph over Otto Greiner, of Baltimore, semi-finalist in this year's Intercollegiate championship.

Harry Todd, runner-up to Ward in last month's Western amateur, beat Jim Lewis, of Toledo, by a moderate 4 and 3 margin and then won eight of 10 holes to trim Matt Zadalis, of Ralston, Neb., 9 and 8.

His rival tomorrow morning will be Pat Abbott, the one-time movie extra from Los Angeles and 1938 finalist. Abbott had to go the full 18 holes to beat Johnny Vavra, his first-round rival, and took Wehrle into camp by a 3 and 2.

BILLOWS WINS EASILY.

The fourth "big leaguer" was Ray Billows, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., the one-time Cinderella kid who was runner-up to Goodman in 1937 and Ward in 1939. He whipped another New Yorker, Arthur K. Atkinson Jr., his first time out, and followed that with a 4-and-3 decision over Lloyd Ramsey, of Lexington, Ky.

The principal dope-upsetters were Skee Riegel, of Glendale, Calif., and Bobby Riegel, former Virginia teen-age star who now lives in Houston, Texas, and Jennings, the bank clerk who Ward predicted would be a tough customer for anybody.

Skee Riegel put out Gonzalez by 2 and 1 and Grover Poole, of Raleigh (N. C.), the Southern Con-

TOO BAD, FELLOWS—Out at Tech High they would feel pretty optimistic about the coming grid year if they had a few hefty fellows like this to run interference for Jack Couch (left) and the other Smithie backs. But Tom Hargrove (right) won't be out in front of the oval toters for the Smithies this year, though he was two years ago. The burly and speedy Atlanta lad, who is working out with the Blacksmiths, was one of the standout guards on that great Alabama Freshman eleven last year, and Frank Thomas is expected to use him a great deal this year as the Crimson Tide makes its bid for the 1941 Southeastern Conference championship. Hargrove is just getting in a little voluntary pre-season practice to try to get the jump on his rivals for the Red Elephant guard position. Couch is co-captain of the 1941 Smithies.

Bobby Jones Is Still Hero To Golf Fans---and Pros, Too

Old Master Was a Dream Walking in Detroit Match; Picard Says Atlantan Could Come Back If He So Willed.

By WHITNEY MARTIN.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Several thousand Detroit fans saw a dream walking last weekend, and if the dream would continue to stalk the fairways it would be the greatest thing that could happen to boom golf.

It won't happen, of course. The dream, answering to the name of Bobby Jones, never will play serious competitive golf again, but for a few fleeting hours the fans had a flashback of those vivid, glorious days when Jones was to golf what ham is to eggs.

They were seeing something they never expected to see again. They were seeing Bobby Jones in a flash of the old competitive spirit which carried him to unmatched heights. It was seeing Babe Ruth step up and hit another home run, or Jack Dempsey in the ring again swinging with hungry fury.

Fred Corcoran, long-since hardened against hero worship through his association with the money-conscious pros as their tournament manager, couldn't quiet the undertone of awe as he spoke of the Georgian and his performance in the charity match against the Ryder Cup team at Detroit.

CHARM AND GRACE.

"The entire gallery, and the other golfers too, were always conscious of his presence," Corcoran enthused. "There is such grace and charm in his every move.

"He'd have to play some competitive golf to regain his tournament form. He has relaxed too much, is too gracious. He doesn't show his teeth the way he used to. He's the gentleman golfer now. Not that he wasn't always the gentleman, and always considerate of others. But he'd lost that killer instinct that drives the Sneads and the Hogans and the Nelsons.

"He still has the shots. He hits as long a ball and as straight a ball as he ever did. I think if he has lost anything it is his putting touch, which is retained through regular competition.

"In fact, it was Henry Picard who said that the only difference between the Jones of today and the Jones of the victory years is

Judy Harlan Visits Here; Was One of Tech's Greatest

By JACK TROY.

Every Tech man who followed football in the early '20's should recognize the likeness of the smiling gentleman accompanying this piece for the paper.

It would be a cinch if he were wearing a headgear. And if Red Barron were standing alongside him, also wearing a headgear. He cleared the way for David Irenus.

Tech fans of the early '20's will recall that the '20 backfield included Jack McDonough or Frank Ferst at quarterback, Buck Flowers at left half, Red Barron at right half and Judy Harlan at fullback. That's Judy grinning at you in the picture.

In 1921 Tech had the same backfield—all, that is, except Flowers, the great kicker.

Coach Bill Alexander recalled yesterday that "Harlan was an old-fashioned fullback, great blocker and line bucker."

Before he went to Georgia Tech, Harlan was a great fullback at Tech High school and was in the Navy for a couple of years. He played with Moon Ducote and others on the Great Lakes team at Cleveland and in 1918 they beat Pittsburgh for the national championship.

The Great Lakes team was coached by the late Zinn Scott, when Wallace Wade succeeded as coach of Alabama.

Harlan, successful businessman in the middle west, is here visiting his father for a few days.

Francis Ouimet To Speak Here At 4-Ball Meet

Famous Golfer To Be Principal Speaker at Banquet Sept. 28.

By AL SHARP

Francis Ouimet, whose victory over Harry Vardon and Ted Ray two decades ago is credited with paving the way for golf's popularity in America, will be the main speaker at the annual Southern States Four-Ball tournament September 28.

Mr. Ouimet will speak at the dinner party given by Veazy Rainwater, president, and the Southern Golf Association, which sponsors the tourney.

The banquet will be held at the Atlanta Athletic Club. Bob Jones, in whose honor the tournament is given, will be another featured speaker.

The tourney attracts players from most southern states. All states which are members of the association—there are fourteen—are eligible to send two teams to the meet which is slated at East Lake September 29-October 3.

Tommy Barnes and Gene Gaillard, Atlanta team, won last year in the all-Georgia finals from Johnny Oliver, of Valdosta, and Jennings Gordon, of Rome. Barnes is certain to be on the team this year, having won the state and having led the nation's best amateurs in qualifying for the national.

The Georgia teams will be selected at an early date by the State Golf Association.

Sale of tickets for the tournament will be sponsored by the Alumnae Association of the Kappa Delta sorority, with proceeds going to charity. Mrs. George Bland is president.

SPORTS COCKTAIL.

Owner Warren Wright says he's definitely going to send Whirlaway after Seabiscuit's money-making record, because it would increase the colt's value when he's retired to stud . . . Frank Leahy, who knows his way around in football, got lost in the subway and almost missed the opening session of the Herald-Tribune's football school.

LAST LAUGH.

When Paul Waner made his first western trip with the Braves this summer, a waitress in a Chicago hotel gave him a bright smile and asked: "You're one of the new boys, aren't you?" Paul didn't bat an eye. "Yes, I am," he said, "those records of mine are hereditary."

Bond Ceremonies at Ball Park

Scott To Receive League's $10,000 Bond

There will be a minimum of ceremony tonight as the Crackers and Pelicans participate in Baseball Defense Bond Day, which is being observed by home teams all over the nation.

Last night's game was rained out so the clubs will play a double-header, starting at 7:45 o'clock. Heusser and Stout will probably pitch for the Crackers.

The Southern League is to get delivery on a $10,000 bond and it will be received by President Trammell Scott. Irving Berlin's "Have You Any Bonds?" will be played over the loudspeaker system, and there also will be a transcription of a bond appeal by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr.

The Atlanta team originally was not scheduled to play tonight but arranged to play off a postponed game with New Orleans in order to participate in the National Bond Day program.

Crackers Can Clinch Flag Without Winning Even One More Game

Four Nashville Losses in Last 20 Games Will Automatically Give Atlanta Southern League Pennant; Four Atlanta Wins Will End It.

By JACK TROY.
Constitution Sports Editor.

It would be a sorry way of doing it, but your Atlanta Crackers actually don't have to win another game to clinch the Southern League pennant.

That is, provided Nashville doesn't win the last 20 games in a row.

There is nothing critical about Atlanta's current standing. The Crackers are on the verge of officially ending the 1941 race. There are many ways in which they can accomplish it.

If Nashville should lose four games, even though the Crackers should match them in losses, the race would be over. In other words, four Nashville losses in the last 20 games automatically gives Atlanta a pennant.

FOUR TO CLINCH IT

If Atlanta wins four games, it's all over. If Atlanta wins one and Nashville loses three—ditto. If Atlanta wins two and Nashville loses two—same difference.

Should the Crackers lose 10 straight as Nashville won as many in a row, Atlanta still would be three and one-half games out in front.

The Crackers have the opportunity of ending the race on the current home stay. For all they have to do is win four games and then it will make no difference what Nashville does.

In order to lose the lead they now command they would have to lose their last 13 straight games as Nashville won 15 out of 20.

The Vols aren't playing that kind of ball and, while their record for the past month wasn't anything to write home about, neither are the Crackers.

So just stand by, folks; a Southern League order for another Atlanta pennant will be put in 'most any day now.

Newman, Vol Back, Seeks Enlistment

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 27.—(AP)—Fred (Ox) Newman, ballotin' back for Tennessee's football Vols, has applied for enlistment in the United States Navy Air Corps.

He will go to Atlanta today or tomorrow for examination by the Atlanta flight selection board for a period of a month. Newman applied for the position with the Knoxville Navy recruiting office.

The veteran fullback who scored 92 points for the Vols last season and as a sophomore was in the starting Rose Bowl lineup in 1939, previously had attempted to enlist in other U. S. armed forces, and a week ago sought to enter the Royal Canadian Air Force. He took civilian pilot's training at Tennessee.

DAREDEVIL DRIVER—Bill France, reckless Daytona Beach (Fla.) stock car driver, is shown in the act of turning over in the recent race won by Lloyd Seay, Atlanta. France, who finally finished seventh after the spill, is entered in the Lakewood park Labor Day championship—100 miles of motor madness.

Dust Being Eliminated For Labor Day Races

Dust, bugaboo of auto racing, will be reduced to a minimum, if not eliminated entirely, in the 100-mile championship stock car race scheduled for Labor Day at Lakewood park.

Road Superintendent W. G. Patton recently directed the application of 40,000 pounds of calcium chloride to Lakewood speedway, and this is, according to authorities, a guarantee of a dustless track for Labor Day.

Lakewood Speedway officials have spent considerable time and money in the improvement of the track these past few days. This preparation is in prospect of one of the greatest stock car races ever held here.

Lloyd Seay, Harley Taylor, Fonelleo and Bob Flock, Red Singleton, LeRoy Hicks, Gober Sosebee, Carson Dyer, T. W. Bourne, Walt McKibben, Roy Mincey, Pete Wells, Ernie Rutledge, Jack Howard, Lamar Woodall, Tip Lanthier, Bub Seither, Jap Brogdon, Al Crisler, Speed Morelock, Claude Harpe, Joe Brennan and Bill France, among others, are due to face Chief Starter Sig Haugdahl's flag.

Time trials will be held on Sunday, August 31, for drivers within a radius of 100 miles of Atlanta, while drivers living beyond this distance will be permitted to qualify on Labor Day between 1 and 2 p. m., which also includes any drivers within the 100-mile radius who may be racing at another track on Sunday.

The Labor Day program begins at 3 p. m., as do the time trials on Sunday, and a gigantic fireworks program will climax the Labor Day celebration at 9:30 p. m., Southeastern Fair president and racing association head, Mike Benton, announced.

Greenberg Is Caught Speedin

M. P. Says Hank Going 40 in 25 Zon

FORT CUSTER, Mich., Aug. 27.—(AP)—Corporal Henry Greenberg, former outfielder of the Detroit Tigers baseball team, was arrested by military police at 12:30 a. m. today for speeding inside the Fort Custer grounds.

Press relations officers at the fort quoted the military police as saying Greenberg, who has his own automobile, was driving 4 miles an hour along Dickman road, where the speed limit is 2 miles an hour.

As an immediate result, they explained, Greenberg automatically is "grounded"—deprived for 30 days of the privilege o driving on the military reservation.

Arrest of the former major leaguer disclosed for the first tim that he had not accompanied the Fifth Division on its trip t the Second and Third Army maneuvers in Louisiana. Greenber was one of three members of the Second Infantry's antitank com pany to be left behind for what the Army calls "housekeepin detail."

Clark To Box Charles Easley Friday Night

Lonnie Clark, ace fighter of the Atlanta Boys' Club, will get a chance to redeem himself Friday night. Lonnie has been matched against Charles Easley, Florida state welterweight champion in 1940.

Clark suffered his first defeat of the season at the hands of Roland Lee a week ago in the biggest upset of the current amateur boxing series. He was figured to defeat Lee after a tough battle, but the dope bucket took a rough shellacking, as did Lonnie. However, he is working hard to get back into shape for this week's match.

Easley went to the finals of the national golden gloves boxing tournament last year in New York, and is rated one of the best amateur boxers in the entire southland. So, should Clark succeed in gaining even a close decision over Easley his stock would spurt up several points. Sometimes it takes a setback to make an athlete fight all the harder and attain n heights.

The rest of the card shows E est Stokes against Bobby Shie of Dalton; John Tibbs, of Dalt against Perry Gant, of Norcr or Ben Glaccum, of Decatur, G Head, of Dalton, against Aub Seignious and Earl Coleman, T High, against George Bond, Camp Gordon Naval Air Stati

Softball Semi-Finals Tonight

Rain Postpones State Meet Tilts Here

Rain forced postponement of the semi-finals in the annual state softball tournament last night but the same program, with two thrill-promised battles, will be held tonight at Warren field.

The Atlanta Police Department's defending champions will tackle Rome in the opening game at 8 o'clock. Eastern Air Lines, of College Park, will battle third-seeded Lindale in the second game at 9:15 o'clock.

Given an extra day's rest, Homer Carter, who won his first start and took another game in a relief role during Police's first two games, will start on the mound against Rome. The battle should be one of the closest of the tourney, as Police and Rome have met several times before, always with hair-raising finishes.

Likewise, Eastern and Lindale are expected to wage a nip-and-tuck contest for the right to enter the finals.

The finals will be a best-two-out-of-three-game series.

The state winner will represent Georgia in the national tournament next month in Detroit, Mich.

Warren field is located on Memorial drive.

DETROIT, Aug. 27.—(AP)—The Detroit Tigers defeated the Boston Red Sox, 6 to 3, in the opener of a 2-game series today behind the 7-hit pitching of Johnny Gorsica, who took over when young Hal Newhouser faltered in the first inning. Rudy York homered in the sixth.

Blunt Is Kayoed By Bill Poland

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Bill Poland, New York Jewish battler just starting up the heavyweight trail, knocked out rugged Eddie Blunt, New York Negro, here tonight in the fourth heat of a scheduled 25-round bout.

Poland, displaying a devastating right hand, floored Blunt twice before a pile-driver straight right-handed punch to the jaw sent the Negro to the canvas for the count.

Poland himself went down in the second for a five-count after taking a straight left to the face. After that round, Jack Kearns, Poland's manager, told him: "Get in and fight. Take a chance. Knock him out or get knocked out yourself." Poland, who Kearns claims is a harder hitter than Jack Dempsey was in the Manassas Mauler's heydey, took the advice literally.

Hogan, Snead Favorites for Hershey Open

Host Ben Carries Enviable Record To Meet Starting Today.

By TOM REEDY.

HERSHEY, Pa., Aug. 27.—(AP) Ben Hogan and Sam Snead, winners of nine of the 24 major golf tournaments of 1941, stood out tonight as the men to beat for the $5,000 Hershey Open championship over 72 holes of medal play in the next four days.

Hogan, now the host professional at the Hershey Country Club, carries a remarkable record into the tournament. He has won $12,733 this year, $4,000 more than Snead, the nearest competitor among the golf professionals. Little Ben has averaged 70.3 strokes per round, while Snead is second in this department, too, with an average of 71.04 over 65 18-hole rounds.

Hogan and Snead have just about spread-eagled the field in the competition for the Vardon trophy, given to the professional golfer with the best accomplishments over a year's period. Hogan has 418 points; Snead, 343, with Craig Wood, U. S. Open champion, in third place at 316.

Hogan has finished in the money in 53 consecutive tournaments. He has the Hershey Open, the Tam-o-Shanter, at Niles, Ill., the Atlantic City (N. J.) Open; the Hearst Invitation at Philadelphia and the Providence (R. I.) Open remaining to catch Snead's all-time record of money winning in a year—$19,908 set in 1938.

Other leading money winners for the year are Craig Wood, U. S. Open champion, $8,166; Johnny Bulla, $7,073; Byron Nelson, $6,752; Clayton Heafner, $5,527; Lloyd Mangrum, $4,725; Lawson Little, $4,301; Horton Smith, $4,165; Vic Ghezzi, the P. G. A. champion, $3,725; Harold McSpaden, $3,544, and Jimmy Demaret, $3,325.

Wood and Ghezzi will be missing when the field of nearly 100 tees off tomorrow in the opening 18-hole round. They are booked solidly for exhibition matches. One round will be played daily through Sunday, with first prize of $1,200 at stake.

Today's practice rounds produced nothing remarkable except for a hole-in-one by Dave Douglas, of Newark, N. J., on the 146-yard 14th.

Bobby Jones Is Still Hero

the putting, and that competition would remedy that. His judgment still is flawless.

GLORIOUS DRIVE.

"In the Picard match—the first individual match Bobby had played in 11 years—the competitive instinct arose in one glorious drive. Picard himself said he believed he had the match sewed up when he was four up at nine holes, but that before he knew it Jones had squared the match. 'He's a machine,' Picard said, and he added that Bobby could come back to his old form if he so willed."

But he never will so will. The plump, gentlemanly Atlantan who "resigned" from competition at the height of his career rather than embarrass the U. S. G. A., has no desire to resume a competitive life that brought him mental strain to the point of physical illness.

Technically he's a pro, but he'll always be an amateur at heart, and he'll always be an amateur to the millions who followed his every move during the glory years. He wouldn't ask to compete as an amateur and he wouldn't enter a tournament as a pro, so he has just floated in between, a fleecy cloud touching neither the sun nor the earth.

Probably he could return to his former form, but even if he did he probably never would enjoy the same success, and for that reason we hope he never tries to come back. We want to remember him as the dream golfer he was, a hero without feet of clay.

fight he deserved, was that Nova had never had a title chance.

But there are all sorts of strange stories going the rounds as to what happened the "other time" Louis and Nova fought. That fictitious battle, in some quarters, had Nova crushed and at the point of retirement.

Actually, the fans are thinking of the Galento-Nova fight. Roly poly Tony gave Nova an awful licking. But since then, of course, Nova has acquired "dynamic stance" and 'cosmic," or comic, punch.

And anyone who has seen Louis in action doesn't doubt Nova will need all this and probably more.

All Hit—No Myth Billy Wilson, pro at Bobby Jones, is a wonder. He was looking out the window the other day at Bobby Jones and saw one of the neatest slices in his experience.

Later, Wilson said, "I can cure that for you in a short time." The grip which, consisted of holding the club with left hand so that the knuckle of the first finger was pointed down the shaft, seemed a bit awkward at first. So did Muggsy Smith's one-lesson illustration of letting the left side do the work.

Today, however, the slice is gone. There is more rhythm in the swing. A rigid left wrist, according to the Smith dictates, is just the thing for a crisp iron shot, and Pro Wilson's no-slice grip is good enough, or maybe too good, for me.

Old Paul (Slick) Sanford, who works for the Atlanta Baseball Corporation, understands. It cost Slick two-two-two (Nassau play) to be convinced that it wasn't all a myth. As Slick knows today, it was all hit—and no myth.

ference titleholder, 6 and 5—being three under par for the latter performance. Bobby (no relation) Riegel, handed Goodman a 20-hole licking that took much of the punch out of the tournament for the local galleryites, and Jennings first handed Chapman a 5-and-4 defeat which Ward had forecast and then, despite some sloppy golf, was able to eliminate Bliss by 4 and 3.

Tomorrow there again will be two sets of 18-hole matches, to cut the field to four men for the 36-hole semifinals Friday.

Wrestling Matches Scheduled Tonight

PilotClubSeeks To Enter City In Prayer Move

Co-operation of Christian Council, Mayor LeCraw Will Be Sought.

Atlanta Pilot Club members yesterday began a move to place Atlanta behind a "Prayer for Peace" program initiated by the national organization, and will seek co-operation of the Atlanta Christian Council at the September 8 meeting of that body and then will ask Mayor LeCraw to appeal to the public to join in intercessions for the fall of despotic governments and the return of peace.

Mrs. Gene Berkley and Mrs. Carolyn Seivers, of the civic committee of the Atlanta organization, are in charge of the program, patterned after one now in progress in Meridian, Miss. Plans call for the sounding of a whistle at noon each day as a signal to call Atlanta to prayer for peace.

Mrs. Seivers said the whistle will remind the populace to "divest their minds of all material thoughts while fervently praying to the Prince of Peace that peace shall be restored in this troubled world."

There are 128 clubs in the United States and similar action is expected in all cities where they are located. The Atlanta organization has 47 leading business women in its membership.

30 Registrars Will Be Sworn For New Tasks

Training Will Precede Work of Re-registering Fulton Voters.

Thirty deputy registrars who will re-register qualified voters of Fulton county, will be sworn into office this morning and then will "go to school."

Judge T. H. Jeffries, county ordinary, will administer the oaths.

Afterward, the deputies will assemble in a courtroom on the fourth floor to learn how to re-register voters, what to ask them, how to administer the oath.

Re-registration will begin September 2 at schools in the county outside the city, and notices have been mailed each voter what day to appear at the school nearest him for re-registration.

The deputy registrars will work in the schools of the county before coming back to the city beginning the week of September 8, during which city voters must re-register.

T. Earl Suttles, tax collector and registrar, urged that voters not attempt to register except at the places and times specified.

Surprise birthday party for Judge Robert Carpenter, of the civil court of Fulton county, was staged by employes of the court yesterday. He was presented a cake with 36 candles on it. He blew them all out at one time, with the help of an electric fan.

Atlanta's police band played last night before a gathering of United States Naval flying cadets and officers at the reserve air base at old Camp Gordon. About 50 persons from Lawson General hospital were present.

Bank clearings yesterday totaled $15,600,000, as compared with $8,600,000 for the corresponding day last year, the Atlanta Clearing House Association announced.

Nominations for president and vice presiden for the coming year will be made at the luncheon meeting of the Junior Chamber of Commerce at 12:15 o'clock this afternoon at the Ansley hotel.

Atlanta Scout Awarded Medal For Saving Life

Jack Thompson, 15, Gave First Aid to Injured Negro Woman.

Fifteen-year-old Jack Thompson, a second-class Atlanta Boy Scout, was awarded the Beck medal at the August meeting last Monday night of the Court of Honor for heroic efforts in saving the life of a Negro woman.

The medal is an annual award to the Georgia Scout recording the most humane and humanitarian deed of the year and represents the saving of one or more lives.

Explaining that he heard a terrific smash early one morning last June, Jack said he rushed out the front door of his home and saw an automobile wrapped around a telephone pole a few doors up the street.

Heard Painful Cries.

"I could hear painful cries from the demolished machine even before I got to it," Jack recounted, "but I found only one of the three occupants in serious condition. She had sustained a smashed arm."

Remembering the art of wrapping a bleeding arm, one of the requisites to becoming a second-class Scout, Jack carefully and skilfully with the nimble hands of a veteran surgeon, stopped the flow of blood and tended to other minor wounds while waiting for the ambulance, which was an hour and ten minutes in arriving.

At the hospital doctors praised the work of the youth while assuring themselves the patient would never have lived to reach the hospital, if it had not been for Jack.

Airplane Builder.

The youth will be a junior at North Fulton High school come September 15, but most of all, he wants this epidemic of infantile paralysis to clear up so he can go in swimming and complete his last remaining test to become a first-class Scout.

But saving lives and Scouting is only sidelines in his crowded life, for he is an expert model airplane builder and operates a big summer soft drink stand at the Brookhaven Country Club.

Jack, a member of Boy Scout troop 34 at Buckhead, resides with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Thompson, at 81 Mabry drive.

Air Passenger Traffic on Rise

Delta Air Lines announced yesterday its passenger business for July showed an increase of 87 per cent over July last year, and a 12 per cent gain over June of 1941.

Laigh C. Parker, vice-president in charge of traffic, said Delta's 87 per cent increase for July is the "greatest annual gain in Delta's history and was due in part to the large volume of defense travel over the system."

A gain of 1215 per cent was reported by Parker for the first six months of 1941 as compared with the same period in 1935.

A gain in Atlanta of 94 per cent was reported.

Dallas Escapes Are Captured AtMilledgeville

14-Year-Old Boy Covers Crews and Dickerson With Gun.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Aug. 27.—Two escaped Georgia convicts from the Paulding county prison camp at Dallas, ran afoul of the law here early today when they encountered H. I. West, of the Coopersville district, who attempted to recover the automobile in possession of the men that was stolen from his son, Howard Sibley West, early last Friday morning.

Mr. West and his 14-year-old son were responsible for the capture of Hubert Dickerson and Bunnell Crews, who escaped from the Dallas camp about 10 days ago.

Napleon Hodges discovered the men and the car about 7:30 a. m. as the vehicle was parked, out of gas, about three-fourths of a mile from Mr. West's home. Hodges immediately set out after West, who armed himself and proceeded to apprehend the men.

Dickerson was said to have fired point blank at Mr. West when he was about five feet from his son's car, then in the hands of the escaped men. West's son, alert for any eventuality, grabbed the gun Dickerson had just fired when he dropped it into the floor of the stalled automobile. Young West then took command of the situation by covering the escaped men with the gun and ordered them to "Get out and get on the bank."

Hodges held a gun on the men while Mr. West left to call W. L. Harrison, Baldwin county sheriff, to the scene.

The men are being held in the Baldwin county jail, pending a decision of the solicitor general as to whether the men will be bound over here for trial or will be returned to the camp at Dallas.

The car belonging to Howard West was stolen early last Friday morning. Howard West resides in Milledgeville and is employed by a local department store.

The car had been driven approximately 3,000 miles, West said, since it was stolen from him.

Tobacco May Be Sold At Carolina Markets

Georgia tobacco growers whose crop was not ready for sale at marketing places in the state will be able to offer it at Carolina warehouses with only a nominal charge for grading and tying, it was announced here yesterday.

O. N. Singleton, statistician of the State Department of Agriculture, said he had made the necessary arrangements with South Carolina tobacco officials.

Tobacco is sold loose in Georgia, but South Carolina requires that it be graded and tied. Singleton said that because of the lateness of the Georgia crop, many growers were not able to sell all of their tobacco before the warehouses closed last week. He was unable to estimate the quantity.

Intellectual Appeal of No Avail In Present Crisis, Says Einstein

(This is the second of a series of articles by famous naturalized Americans, digested from the newly published book "I Am An American," just released by Alliance Book Corp. The author of the following article, Dr. Albert Einstein, world-famous scientist, became an American citizen last October. He left Germany after the rise of Nazism in 1933.

Words Alone Will Not Solve Problems Today, He Contends.

By DR. ALBERT EINSTEIN, World-Famous Scientist.

(Condensed from the new book: "I am an American," just published by Alliance Book Corporation; distributed by International News Service by special permission.)

My subject, of course, is democracy, but I must say that I do not think words alone will solve humanity's present problems. The sound of bombs drowns out men's voices. In ordinary times—times of peace—I have great faith in the communication of ideas between thinking men, but today I am afraid the intellectual way to appeal to men is fast becoming of little avail with brute force dominating so many million lives.

Seven years ago, when asked for the reason why I had given up my position in Germany—I made this statement: "As long as I have any choice I will only stay in a country where political liberty, toleration, and equality of all citizens before the law is the rule. Political liberty implies liberty to express one's political opinion orally and in writing, and a tolerant respect for any and every individual opinion."

Development of Individual

Making allowances for human imperfections, I do feel that in America the most valuable thing in life is possible, the development of the individual and his creative powers. There may be men who can live without political rights and without opportunity of free individual development. But I think that this is intolerable for most Americans.

Here, for generations, men have never been under the humiliating necessity of unquestioning obedience. Here human dignity has been developed to such a point that it would be impossible for people to endure life under a system in which the individual is only a slave of the state and has no voice in his government and no decision on his own way of life. We simply will not be driven about like sheep, we are independent. We are self-reliant. We do not know what it means to be deferential to class or position. Fortunately for us "obey" is a little heard word, and "co-operate" is a common one.

Against Totalitarianism

I think from what I have seen of Americans since I have come here, they are not suited by temperament or tradition for existence under a totalitarian system. I think that most of them would not find life worth living in that way. Therefore, it is very important that they consider how these liberties that are so necessary to them may be preserved and defended. Americans can and must co-operate because nothing truly valuable can be achieved except by the unselfish co-operation of many individuals.

In my own field science has provided the possibility of liberation for human beings from hard labor, but science itself is not a liberator. It creates means, not goals. Men should use them for reasonable goals. When the ideals of humanity are war and conquest, these tools become as dangerous as a razor in the hands of a child of three. We must not condemn man's inventiveness and patient conquest of the forces of nature because they are being used wrongly and destructively now. The fate of humanity is entirely dependent upon its moral development.

Organization of Nations.

I am convinced that a federal organization of the nations of the world is not only possible but even an absolute necessity if the conditions on our planet are not to become unbearable for men. The League of Nations failed because its members were not willing to give up part of their rights of sovereignty and because the league was without any executive power. A world organization cannot insure peace effectively unless it has control over the whole military power of its members.

Exaggerated nationalism is an artificially created emotional state resulting from the necessity to be prepared for war. This exaggerated nationalism would quickly disappear with the elimination of the war-danger. I do not believe that the unequal geographical distribution of raw materials must necessarily lead to wars.

As long as a nation has access to the materials which are necessary for its development, it can very well prosper. This is shown clearly by nations such as Switzerland, Finland, Denmark and Norway, which belonged to the most progressive countries of Europe before the war.

Distribution of Materials.

One of the most important functions of such an international organization would be to secure unhampered distribution of the raw materials and free access to the markets. The solution of the internal economical and social problems could be left largely to the individual states. I am far from optimistic, for what I have said is not a prophecy but a statement of what must be done to prevent life on this earth from becoming unbearable.

Everybody will agree that we are now further removed from this goal than seemed to be the case 10 years ago. This setback could have been avoided if the democracies had then shown the same solidarity and readiness for sacrifice they are showing now in this hour of grave emergency. Will to sacrifice, solidarity and wise foresight, however, are most effective before the hour of dire necessity has arrived. May our America be spared such an hour through the resolute action of her citizens and statesmen.

(Next: Igor Sikorsky, famous designer of the transoceanic flying clippers, tells what American citizenship means to him.)

Oconee Soil Group Holds 'Field Day'

Success of Conservation Practices Studied in Winder Area.

By FRANCES HALEY.

WINDER, Ga., Aug. 27.—Co-operators of one of Georgia's youngest soil conservation units, the Oconee River Soil Conservation district, assembled in Winder and Hoschton yesterday for their annual field day. The program included a tour of farms in Barrow and Jackson counties which are successfully following soil-building practices.

Oconee river district was organized three years ago with Jackson and Barrow counties co-operating. Since that time Clarke and Oconee counties have joined the group.

First Tour.

This was the first conducted tour of Barrow county and members of the party were favorably impressed with the many projects now underway and with the progress soil conservation has made in the county since it was introduced.

Farms visited in the tour were those of R. F. Pirkle, of Jackson county; J. V. Booker, Paul T. Maynard, Bill Rutledge and E. F. Harwell, in Barrow county. On each farm different phases of the program were pointed out and owners explained their purpose and discussed results obtained from carrying out the practices.

Special interest was manifest in the fine stand of kudzu and sericea lespedeza on the Booker farm. Mr. Booker recommended kudzu for checking erosion and as feed for cows and horses. It was stated that this plant produced from three to five tons of feed to the acre, was easy to grow and harvest and required little cultivation.

Increased production of livestock was also stressed by farm leaders and conservation directors as a means of boosting farm incomes and preserving the land. Strip planting, rotation of crops, borderline planting, terracing and other practices were demonstrated to the visitors.

W. M. Holsenbeck, of Winder, is chairman of Oconee river district supervisors. Other members of the group are Dean Lott and Hubert Martin, of Jackson county; Jim Towns, of Clarke county, and C. G. Hardegree, of Oconee county.

Leaders Present.

Assisting with the tour were Julian D. Clements, of Athens, district conservationist; W. H. Howell, of Athens, area conservationist; Frank C. Ward, of Athens, executive secretary of the state soil conservation committee. J. D. White, of Barrow; Gus York, of Jackson, and J. W. Harwell, of Clarke, county technicians, were also present.

Following the chicken barbecue held at the home of Tom Maynard, near Winder, outstanding visitors from each of the counties and farmers present told of the benefits they had derived from participation in soil conservation ideas.

Valdosta Seeks PWA Fund for Improvements

$2,000,000 Requested for Expansion of City Program.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

VALDOSTA, Ga., Aug. 27.—Properly executed papers requesting more than $2,000,000 for municipal improvement in Valdosta have been filed in the office of the regional Public Works Administration in Jacksonville, Fla., it is announced by Mayor J. D. Ashley.

The papers and application were approved by the city council and presented to the Jacksonville headquarters by special city Engineer Horace Edmond. The project contemplates extending sewerage lines into every part of the city where it is needed, erecting two modern disposal plants and providing for a complete rebuilding and extension of Valdosta's water supply and distribution system. Also $141,000 is included for a new grammar school building to augment the present school facilities.

It is pointed out that these extensions and improvements are now badly needed because of the large increase in population due to the location here of the Army Bombardier Base, which is now in course of construction.

Mayor Ashley states that according to unofficial information, the Valdosta application is regarded as having a fair show of meeting with PWA approval.

Rising at 6:30 a. m. and retiring at 9:30 in the evening, a regular schedule was followed each day. The program consisted of swimming, woodcraft, civics, safety and instruction in public health.

The district executive of Tallahassee was present at the court of honor exercises and presented each Scout a badge according to his rank. Thomas Garwood received the badge for Star Scout.

LATERAL PARKING SEEN

VALDOSTA, Ga., Aug. 27.—Lateral parking on some of the downtown streets is under consideration by the city administration. With the increase in traffic occasioned by the Army activity here traffic officers are often unable to satisfactorily cope with the jams.

No Definite Decision Made About Circus

Show Has Not Yet Obtained License for Display Here.

The question of whether or not the Cole Brothers circus will play Atlanta next Monday and Tuesday remained moot yesterday.

Mayor LeCraw, backed by a letter from Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, director of the State Department of Health that the showing would be dangerous due to the polio situation, said "No," while Ora O. Parks, advance agent for the show, said "Yes."

A delegation from the Atlanta Federation of Trades, headed by Albert Gossett, president, conferred with the Mayor, who referred the group to Dr. Abercrombie, who, in turn, told the group he could do nothing, saying, "My responsibility is to protect health."

Meanwhile, it was revealed that the circus has not yet obtained a license to play this city. Joe Richardson, city clerk, who issues such licenses, said that if the Mayor asked him not to issue the license, he would not do so "unless instructed to do so by the tax committee," which supervises his department.

Mayor LeCraw sent a telegram to the circus management Tuesday, asking that the Atlanta showing be postponed until October. Thus far, he said, he has not received a reply.

It was also learned that the circus was barred from showing in Chattanooga when health authorities refused them permission, while in Knoxville, attendance was restricted to children over 12.

U.S. NYA Head Inspects State Youth Projects

Administrator Impressed by Eagerness of Young People.

Aubrey Williams, National Youth Administrator, made a flying trip to Atlanta yesterday on a nine-state tour of NYA projects, inspected projects in progress at Chapman Springs, Habersham, Marietta and Carrollton, and was on his way back to Washington last night.

Declaring that he was "tremondously impressed by the eagerness of our young people here in Georgia and elsewhere to take their places in the production lins," Williams made a whirlwind inspection of every type of NYA job being done in the state and talked to several hundred young men and women.

"I've heard for a long time about the excellent work being done here," Williams said. "Our young people have everything it takes if only they get a chance to work. They'll come through."

A native of Alabama, Administrator Williams is an enthusiastic believer in all-out defense for the democracies. Unable to wait for the United States to enter the first World War, he joined the French Foreign Legion in 1916 and fought with it until this country went in.

Now, 24 years later, he is mindful of "the menace of threats from across the waters" and has geared his entire youth-serving agency to the needs of America's preparedness effort.

Mrs. Williams accompanied the administrator to Atlanta. State Administrator Boisfeuillet Jones made the inspection trips with the national administrator.

TO JAIL ON SUNDAYS.

Imprisonment on Sundays for six weeks was the penalty assessed by Police Judge H. D. Moncur, of Yuba City, Cal., upon Edward L. Nieto, 18, and Robert N. May, 18, accused of stealing bakery goods from a truck. Judge Moncur suspended a 30-day jail sentence and decided upon the Sunday imprisonment when he learned that the youths had weekday jobs.

Lindbergh Speech Site Is Assured

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 27.—(AP)—A site accommodating 10,000 persons was assured today for speeches of Charles A. Lindbergh and Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, here Friday night, the America First Committee announced.

When the city council ordered cancellation of the municipal auditorium for Lindbergh's speech, State Chairman Herbert K. Hyde, of the committee, declared that the famous airman would talk here even if he had to use a cow pasture.

COUSIN SAYS LINDBERGH FAILS TO MEET TEST

CINCINNATI, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Augustus F. Lindbergh, an Alabama attorney, said tonight the test of a true American was whether or not an individual could subordinate his will to that of the government during an emergency and that Charles A. Lindbergh, his cousin, had failed to meet that test.

He made the same observation concerning Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, Montana. The Alabaman said:

"Remember there is one Lindbergh, Augustus Franklin Lindbergh, the country boy from Alabama, who is no appeaser; and who is not afraid of what the future holds for the United States of America under the leadership of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Atlanta Launching Still Question Mark

Just when the Navy's new 6,000-ton cruiser, the U. S. S. Atlanta, will be launched is still a big question mark to Novelist Margaret Mitchell, who is supposed to swing the champagne bottle.

But it definitely won't be Saturday—or, at least, that was Miss Mitchell's information yesterday. So said Charles W. Bryan, Jr., vice-president of the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Company at Kearny, N. J., informed in a long-distance conversation the launching remains in the "indefinitely postponed" category.

The ceremony at Kearny was delayed by a strike which tied up the shipbuilding plant and the original launching date of August 9 was postponed to August 23, then indefinitely delayed. The government took over the plant this week and there were reports the Navy had tentatively decided on Saturday for the launching.

U. S. Fingerprint Necessity Urged

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(INS).—A special American mission sent to England to study civilian defense in the war-torn British Isles today recommended that "the entire population" of the United States should be fingerprinted for "identification of casualties."

Without mentioning the possibility of an invasion of this continent or of possible bombing raids on the United States, the mission, in its report to Civilian Defense Director F. H. LaGuardia, said:

"Fingerprinting of the entire population for identification of casualties is deemed necessary."

The mission also recommended that necessary civilian defense personnel, including police and firemen, should be exempted from military service under the draft law.

Truck Strikes Alabaman Here

J. H. Smith 38, of Birmingham, Ala., was injured yesterday when he was struck by a truck while crossing Walton street at Spring street. He was admitted to Grady hospital suffering fractures of both legs and head injuries.

Smith was struck by a truck owned by the Atlantic Ice & Coal Company, driven, police reported, by Sam Wise, 47, of 820-A Beckwith street. Smith was thrown under the truck and the rear wheels passed over him.

According to police, Wise was driving too near the pedestrian lane in which Smith was walking. A charge of reckless driving, accident was booked against him.

Brenda Frazier Succeeded by Society Blond

Betty Cordon Elected Miss Glamourpuss of 1941-1942.

By INEZ ROBB.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(INS)—Step right this way, men, and meet Miss Glamourpuss of 1941-42. Almost five-feet-two with eyes of blue, Betty Cordon—blonde debutante—was officially elected the season's successor of Mrs. Shipwreck Kelly, nee Brenda Frazier, at a cocktail rout and pretzel party at the Stork Club this eve'n tide.

It is unofficially estimated that Miss Condon is the 76th debutante in the last three years to have been elected glamour girl successor to Mrs. Kelly, nee Frazier. But that Miss Brenda, like Ole Man River, jes' keeps rolling along.

The election of Miss Cordon, 18, by popular vote at the Stork Club is striking proof that democracy and press-agentry still live. The latest claimant to the glamour crown was elected by a gathering of 1941-42 debutantes and their boy friends, kindly corralled by the club's p. a.

Successful Candidate.

"I'm very excited," cried Miss Cordon happily when the ballots were counted and the tally formally announced by one of Manhattan's most prominent wolves and men-about-town, Peter Arno.

"I didn't expect it and I do not think I am the glamour type," she explained with becoming modesty. Miss Cordon, who is petite, believes that glamour girls should come tall and fully equipped with a glamour hank of long, dark hair. Her long, glamour hank is dark blonde.

Frankly, the world situation has Miss Cordon worried. This doubtless reflects the attitude of her father, Robert W. Cordon. He is a vice president of the Manufacturers Trust Company, one of New York's largest financial institutions, and vice presidents of such organizations just naturally worry about world conditions.

But Miss Cordon managed to keep her worries to herself this afternoon. Light-hearted, carefree and hung with orchids, Miss Cordon came to the party from a business engagement wherein she had turned a neat penny by posing in an advertisement indorsing a national product.

Night After Night.

"I don't think I can possibly follow in the footsteps of Brenda Frazier," she cried breathlessly following the election, as droves of photographers and flash-bulbs encircled her. "My goodness, I couldn't keep up with her. I just couldn't stay out night after night after night all night!"

But she will do her best to live up to her responsibilities, intimated the pretty girl who is equipped with a dimpled chin and other becoming accessories, such as a more than adequate complexion.

Miss Cordon is heading for a double-decker debut. On September 12, she will make her preliminary bow at the debutante ball at Raleigh, N. C. and on the night of January 1, she will be presented at a large dinner party before the annual debutante ball in New York.

Drive Is Launched By Safety Council

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(AP)—The National Safety Council, acting on a request by President Roosevelt, planned today to mobilize an army of safety-minded citizens for a campaign to halt accidents hampering the defense program.

The council urged governors, mayors and other public officials to take emergency action, asked 100 labor unions, engineering societies, civic clubs and other nation-wide organizations to join the movement and called upon its own membership of 5,000 community safety bodies, industrial corporations and governmental departments to revitalize their safety efforts.

Six Bridesmaids To Attend Miss Alexander on Sept. 8

• • • THE ANNOUNCEMENT today of the wedding plans of lovely Elizabeth Alexander and Dr. Harry Vassar Higgins, whose marriage will be a social event of September 9, carries wide social import. The details are rivaled in interest only by the unusual features of sentiment of the bride-elect's wedding attire and some of the presents the couple has received.

The ceremony, you know, takes place at 8 o'clock at the Central Presbyterian church, with the pastor, Dr. Stuart Oglesby, officiating in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends of the young couple. Elizabeth will be given in marriage by her father, J. Harry Alexander, and the groom-elect's brother, Dr. Charles Barker Higgins, of Raleigh, will be the best man.

Elizabeth has chosen her sister, Mrs. James A. Le Conte Jr., of Charlotte, N. C., the former Eloisa Alexander, as her matron of honor. Another sister, Carrie Allen Alexander, will be the junior bridesmaid. The other bridesmaids will be Mrs. Don Shepherd, of Arlington, Va., Mrs. Bealy Smith and Mrs. Fred Ragland, of Dalton. Little Ginny Gaines, of Athens, will be flower girl.

Serving as usher-groomsmen will be Thurston Hillard, of Gladstone, N. J.; Bealy Smith, Dr. Fred Ragland, of Dalton, and Dr. Arthur E. Anderson, of Wilmington, Del. After the ceremony there will be a small informal reception for the bride and groom-elect given by Mr. and Mrs. Alexander at their home in Ansley Park, the guests to be limited to members of the bridal party, the families and the out-of-town guests.

Elizabeth's only ornament will be a handsome pearl pin, which was a gift of her maternal grandfather, the late Manfred Call, to his wife at the time of their marriage. The late Mrs. Call left the pin to Elizabeth and it bears a deep sentiment. Elizabeth's veil will be of handsome rosepoint lace brought here from Brussels for the late Mrs. Call to wear at her wedding. When the latter's daughter, Elizabeth, became the bride of J. Harry Alexander, she wore the veil, too. The next bride to wear the veil was Mrs. Alexander's daughter, Eloisa, who donned it to become the bride of James Le Conte. So, you see, when Elizabeth wears it on September 9 she will be carrying out a mother-daughter tradition, and it is needless to say how beautiful she will look.

Elizabeth and her fiance have received some handsome gifts which will be important and cherished furnishings in their future home in Boston, Mass., where they will reside during the coming year, and where Dr. Higgins is connected with the Forsyth Children's Dental Clinic.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander have given the couple their flat silver, which is in the handsome Fairfax pattern. Mrs. P. R. Allen, Mrs. Lewis Gaines and Miss Lucile Alexander, aunts of the bride-elect, have given her a handsome silver after-dinner coffee service, while Mrs. Allen has also given the couple some coin silver tablespoons which were among the pieces buried by the family at their home in Liberty county when Sherman marched through Georgia. Elizabeth has two more coin silver spoons, given her by her mother, which belonged to the bride-elect's great-great-grandmother Hopper, of Hanover county, Virginia.

And, by the way, Elizabeth's last long-distance call from her fiance in Boston carried the grand news that an apartment had been selected and furnished for them at 25 Park drive.

• • • WHEN LOVELY Gail Nelson becomes Mrs. James Blain on Saturday afternoon at the Cathedral of St. Philip, she will adhere to the traditional bridal custom of wearing "something old, somenew new, something borrowed and something blue."

For her "old" feature, Gail will carry an exquisite real lace handkerchief made by the groom-elect's mother, the late Mrs. E. D. Blain. For her "something borrowed" she will wear a handsome rosepoint lace veil beloging to Mrs. Gene Jamison, of Los Angeles, a close friend. Gail's tulle veil, to be worn under the rosepoint lace, belongs to Mrs. John Feder, the former Virginia Heard.

A handsome sapphire and pearl pin belonging to Elizabeth de Ovies, a close friend of Gail's, will be the "something blue" the bride-elect will wear, and last, but not least, her handsome wedding dress will be new.

By a strange coincidence, rather than intent, the wedding date also marks the anniversary of the marriage of James' paternal grandparents, the late Dr. and Mrs. James Blain. The groom-elect bears the name of the late Dr. Blain.

Due to a recent bereavement in the groom-elect's family, no formal invitations have been issued for the wedding, which will take place at 5:30 o'clock at the cathedral, although verbal invitations have been issued and a large gathering of relatives and friends of the young couple will be in attendance.

• • • WANTED: A nice young bachelor to take the place of one about to change his status to that of a benedict. Requirements for the bachelor include unimpeachable social standing, a pleasing personality, and a moderate financial rating to enable him to share household expenses with another bachelor who is being "left in the lurch" by the about-to-be benedict. The last, but the most important, requirement, is that he have NO intentions of giving up his single blessedness any time in the near future.

The soon-to-be-married bachelor is the sixth in a group of seven young men who shared a house together. Not all at one time, however, for as each one married, another was asked to take his place in the household. He has been constantly escorting his future bride, a pretty brunette, for some time. No formal announcement of the engagement will be made, the only announcement to be that after the wedding takes place.

Parties Planned For Miss Davison, Fall Bride-Elect

Miss Sarah Davison continues to be complimented at social affairs preceding her marriage on September 6 to Howard Eugene Barrett.

On September 3 Mrs. Norman Gibson will fete Miss Davison at a dessert bridge at her home on Lanier boulevard. On September 4 Mrs. J. T. Stilwell will honor the bride-elect at a tea at her home on Erie avenue, the affair having previously been announced as a luncheon for September 3. On the evening of September 5 Mrs. John Underwood and Mrs. Walter Hardy will entertain the Davison-Barrett bridal personnel after the wedding rehearsal. The affair will take place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Matheson on Peachtree road.

Mrs. Jack Davis was hostess yesterday afternoon at a bridge-tea at her Peachtree road residence honoring Miss Davison.

Mrs. Emory Lower assisted her sister in entertaining. Arrangements of white asters and pink roses graced the interior of the home. A feature of the decorative scheme were the tallies which bore caricatures of the honor guest, her fiance, and a minister, which were painted by the hostess' son, Jack Davis Jr.

The guests included Misses Mary Lou Davis, Jane Coffin, Sarah Brody, Gay Deam, Eva Clark, Betty Smith, and Mary Louise Cordes.

Later in the afternoon a few close friends of the bride-elect's mother assembled for tea.

Bridge Group Feted.

The bridge division of the Atlanta Woman's Club was entertained Wednesday morning by the president, Mrs. Howard Pattillo. The new chairman, Mrs. A. P. Woody, was introduced to the members at this time. A luncheon was given for those in attendance.

Four Panhellenic Sororities Meet To Select Rushees

By Kathryn Barnwell Dudley.

A "red letter day" in every high school girl's life is that on which the postman brings her an invitation to join a sorority. No joy is so complete. Likewise, no agony is so acute as that accompahying the decision of a belle who has received several bids—and doesn't know which one to accept!

With the ending of summer vacations, "Hattie Highschool's" thoughts are turning excitedly to fall textbooks—and rush parties.

Active sorority members are already holding meetings for the purpose of compiling their lists of rushees, the Phi Pis and Pi Pis having convened yesterday. The former group met with Ann Owens on West Pace's Ferry road, and the Pi Pis met with Rosalind Price at her Park drive home.

The Sigma Delta group, under the leadership of pretty Lane Winship, has a meeting scheduled for Tuesday to be held at Virginia William's home on Winslow drive, while the O. B. X.s' are meeting this afternoon with Mary Cecile Brown at her home in Ansley Park. Names of prospective rushees will, of course, be kept secret until the day bids are received by eligible sub-debs.

Phi Pi officers are Mary Southerland, president; Jane Hailey, vice president; Emily Alexander, secretary, and Anne DuPre, treasurer.

Conducting Pi Pi meetings are Betty Brown, president; Mary Ann Braungart, vice president; Betty Greves, treasurer, and Matilde Turner, secretary.

Assisting Miss Winship in her duties as president of the Sigma Delta group are Dot Spratlin, vice president; Jacquelin Pope, treasurer; Margaret Ann Speas, secretary, and Mary Ann Curry, sergeant-at-arms.

Three New Shows on Screens And Three More Are Held Over

Tracy Soft-Pedals Horror in 'Jekyll and Hyde'; Lamour Back in Sarong; Capitol Shows 'Paper Bullets.'

By DUDLEY GLASS.

Three new ones and several hold-overs are on the screen menu for the week opening today.

"Aloma of the South Seas," with Dorothy Lamour and Jon Hall, starts at the Fox.

Loew's Grand presents a brand-new version of that famous old-timer, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," with Spencer Tracy in the dual role. Nobody else would matter much.

The Capitol offers "Paper Bullets" for a three-day run.

Held over are "Here Comes Mr. Jordan" at the Rialto; "Andy Hardy" at the Rhodes, and "Hold That Ghost" at the Paramount.

'Jekyll and Hyde'

Stevenson's famous story of the man with two souls, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," has been played on stage and screen with a number of actors in the dual role.

This time Spencer Tracy is—or are—it—or them. It opens today at Loew's Grand.

Tracy's shift of make-up is said to be much less Lon Chaneyish than that of certain other actors who have essayed the taxing role. His interpretation of the sadistic Mr. Hyde soft pedals bizarre facial changes and anatomical postures in favor of something more akin to a psychoanalytic portrayal of the part, according to Victor Saville and Victor Fleming, producer and director of the M-G-M film which opens today at Loew's.

Tracy's unofficial, unscheduled, unpublicized competition with Paul Muni in bringing real-life characters to the screen now stands at four-all. On the M-G-M star's side of the ledger are interpretations of Father Flanagan, of "Boys' Town," the rugged, red-skin-trailing Major Rogers of "Northwest Passage," Henry Stanley in "Stanley and Livingstone" and Charles Alva Edison in "Edison, the Man." Muni's biographical score includes "Juarez," "The Story of Louis Pasteur" and "The Life of Emile Zola" and the part of the cheerful, conniving Pierre Radisson in "Hudson's Bay."

Dot in a Sarong

"Aloma of the South Seas," starting today at the Fox, stars Dorothy Lamour, once more in a sarong or what-is-it—and Jon Hall, who did such fine work in "The Hurricane."

The lure of the South Seas—an eyeful of Lamour glamour—the sleek physique of Jon Hall—an exciting red-blooded tale climaxed by an erupting volcano that explodes into a million colors—these are the highlights of this promised spectacle.

On a Tahitian-type island, Jon Hall, educated son of the native chief, battles for the girl he loves. But Philip Reed, Jon's envious cousin, is deeply in love with the same girl, Dorothy Lamour. In addition to this, Philip resents the power and fortune of the chief's heir. Against a background of South Sea native life and superstition, the two men fight it out.

Lynne Overman, Katherine DeMille, Fritz Leiber and Dona Drake round out the cast, which includes hundreds of brown-bodied extras and Tahitian dancing girls.

The great climax of the film is the shattering eruption of the island's volcano.

'Paper Bullets'

Four of the most popular leading men of the days of silent motion pictures have important roles in "Paper Bullets" which opens a three-day engagement today at the Capitol theater.

The silent day stars are Gavin Gordon, at one time Greta Garbo's leading man. Kenneth Harlan, John Ince and Bryant Washburn—who at one time ranked with Douglas Fairbanks—William Farnum, Charlie Chaplin, Rudolph Valentino and Tom Mix.

Stars of "Paper Bullets" are Joan Woodbury, Jack La Rue, Linda Ware and Joan Archer.

"Paper Bullets" is the story of a city-wide racket ring, ruled by a ruthless queen of crime, as gangland attempts to control one of the largest cities in the country through a gigantic election fraud.

Rialto Holds 'Jordan'

As was expected, due to the large audiences, the Rialto theater is holding for a second week Columbia's "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," presenting Robert Montgomery, Claude Rains, Evelyn Keyes, James Gleason, Edward Everett Horton and Rita Johnson.

"Here Comes Mr. Jordan," is laugh packed from the beginning of its unusual story, that has caused much comment from the many who have seen the picture during its first week's showing.

"Here Comes Mr. Jordan," is predicated upon a hilarious comedy situation whose complications are rich and varied, so that the story can be told and retold. "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," is a story never told on the screen before, a comedy which dares to break every rule of film making, even as it achieves a high level of entertainment. Its characters are gay, adorable, hateful, human and the story still has Hollywood chuckling.

It is best to see "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," from the beginning to get the greatest enjoyment from it. In addition to the feature attraction there is the Rialto's selection of short subjects.

'Ghost' Held Oer

"Hold That Ghost," which had a successful run at the Fox, has been transferred to the Paramount for a week beginning today. It stars Abbott and Costello, the comics, with a cast including Joan Davis, the eccentric dancer, Mischa Auer, the Andrew Sisters and Ted Lewis—with his band.

Abbott and Costello, well known on the radio, broke into fame by following the comic strips and thinking up something.

"Some 12 years ago," says Costello, "we discovered that millions of people, like ourselves, are regular followers of the comic strips. It surprised us, for up to that time we had kept our addiction under cover as being rather juvenile.

"We made a survey of the most popular strips, searching out those in which two men figure—strips on the order of Mutt and Jeff.

"Right then an idea was born. Why couldn't we be animated comic strips? Abbott could be the straight man—the wise guy who knows all the answers—while I could be the butt of most of the jokes, turning the tables on my partner just often enough to keep the customers interested and amused."

'Andy' at the Rhodes

"Life Begins for Andy Hardy," one of the most popular for the Hardy family series, has been transferred from the Grand to the Rhodes, beginning today.

In this chapter Andy is graduated from high school and starts out to conquer the world instead of going on to college.

His career is interrupted by Patricia Dane, one of the front-line beauties of "The Ziegfeld Girl," and Andy falls hard. Terribly hard. But along comes sweet little Judy Garland to steer him straight—and send him to college.

IN ONE MAN'S MIND—Here the Loew's publicity department does some trick photography to present the warped mind of the central character in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," the production which will open the Loew's fall season today.

'Lighter' Shows Will Mark New Movie Season

Loew's To Open With MGM's 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.'

For a number of reasons, the new movie season opening in September promises to be one of the most interesting in many years, Joseph R. Vogel, New York executive of the Loew circuit of theaters, said yesterday. As he sees it, the 1941-42 season will be marked by entertainment in a lighter vein—more comedies, more musicals, more frivolous romances.

"If you insist, you may use the word 'escapist' as the trend of the day," smiles Vogel, who explains that it is his belief that the screen serves a great purpose in times like these when it provides an hour or two of escape from the pressing and depressing worries of a war-pummeled world.

Loew's theaters, being affiliated with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, will be assured of the pictures from that vast laboratory of entertainment. Loew's opens its new season with an M-G-M picture—"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." "Dr. J. and Mr. H." is not one of the lighter pictures Vogel commented upon. But with it, Loew's will show "Tanks a Million," which definitely is light—airy light and one of the funniest comedies made so far on the draftee theme.

The effort will be to balance more serious pictures with others of lighter vein, where double features are played.

Other important M-G-M pictures scheduled for early fall showings are: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Greer Garson and Herbert Marshall in "When Ladies Meet"; Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland in "Babes on Broadway"; Clark Gable and Lana Turner in "Honky Tonk"; "Smilin' Through," with Jeanette MacDonald, Brian Aherne and Gene Raymond; "Shadow of the Thin Man," with William Powell and Myrna Loy; "Panama Hattie," (from the famous current Broadway comedy hit) with Ann Sothern, "Red" Skelton and George Murphy; "Lady Be Good," with Eleanor Powell, Ann Sothern and Robert Young; "Kathleen," with Shirley Temple and Herbert Marshall; "Female of the Species," with Rosalind Russell, Don Ameche and Kay Francis; "The Chocolate Soldier," with Nelson Eddy, Rise Stevens (Metropolitan Opera star); Unholy Partners," with Edward G. Robinson, Edward Arnold and Laraine Day; and a new comedy for Greta Garbo.

Among the United Artists pictures coming to Loew's this season are: "Major Barbara," with Wendy Hiller and Robert Morley; "New Wine," with Ilona Massey; "The Corsican Brothers," with Douglas Fairbanks Jr.; and "Sundown," with Gene Tierney, Bruce Cabot and George Sanders.

Cary Grant, Miss Hutton Deny Marriage Rumors

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Cary Grant and Barbara Hutton, who arrived here separately a few days ago, said today they were "vacationing in Mexico with friends," and emphasized that they had no marriage plans.

"Rumors that we will marry are untrue," said Miss Hutton, Woolworth heiress whose divorce from Count Cort Haugwitz-Reventlow, of Denmark, became final last March 1. "I plan to be here about three weeks, but no longer as I am already anxious to return to New York to see my baby."

Interviewed independently, the motion picture actor said the only reason he was in Mexico was for a vacation and added: "Honestly, on the square, there is nothing to reports that Miss Hutton and I may marry."

Two Benning Officers Die In Auto Crash

Members of Parachute Unit Are Killed Near Richland.

RICHLAND, Ga., Aug. 27.—(AP) Two young officers of the Army's first parachute troop units at Fort Benning died today in the crash of an overturning automobile. A third was seriously injured.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Aug. 27. (AP)—The four Steyerman brothers—Sidney, Clifford, Henry and Lawrence, who served in World War I—have offered free management and advisory services to their fellow merchants of Thomasville who are called into active military service.

They offer "assistance in store management, stock control, inventories, merchandising planning, window and interior displaying, and advertising your business until you again are able to direct its affairs.

"There is absolutely no charge for this service. Executives of this concern will gladly give their cooperation to hold the banners high for a successful conclusion."

North Central States Hit by Snow and Hail

Subfreezing Weather in Wisconsin Heralds Approach of Fall.

By The Associated Press.

Snow, hail and freezing temperatures heralded the approach of autumn in the north central states, but to perspiring residents over most of the nation yesterday was just another hot, dry day.

At Chicago, the Weather Bureau reported subfreezing weather for the first time since last spring, the mercury sliding to 29 at Land O'Lakes and Beaver Brook, in the cranberry marsh sections of Wisconsin.

Somewhat warmer weather was in prospect for that section today.

Duluth, Minn., had a low of 33 degrees and a hailstorm in the vicinity of Colorado Springs made necessary the use of a snow plow to clear highways.

The New York-New Jersey section, where electric and rain storms caused death, damage and serious traffic tie-ups, things were getting back to normal.

A cool wave descending from Canada was responsible for the cold spell in northern states, but the Weather Bureau said other sections of the country would not feel its effects for several days, if at all.

ANY BONDS TODAY?—That's the name of the song written by Irving Berlin for the United States Treasury Department and sung last night before the meeting at the Henry Grady of the Georgia Defense Savings Committee. Georgia Among First Eight in U. S. Bond Sales

State Committee of 137 Attends Rally and Dinner Here.

Georgia is among the eight leading states in the Union in the sale of defense savings bonds and stamps, Gale F. Johnston, national field director of the drive, told a distinguished gathering of Georgians at the Henry Grady Hotel last night.

The occasion was the initial gathering of the state committee of the defense savings staff of the United States Treasury in Georgia. Members of the committee came from all parts of Georgia and represented industry, finance, education, labor, the pulpit and agriculture.

After a dinner, the committee, totaling 137 men and women, saw the complete floor show from the Paradise Room of the hotel. This was the hotel management's contribution to the drive.

During the program, Paris Lee sang "Any Bonds Today?" the theme song of the savings drive, written especially for the United States Treasury Department by Irving Berlin.

The meeting was opened by Arthur Lucas, state chairman, who called upon Dr. Robert W. Burns, of the Peachtree Christian church, for a prayer. Marion Allen, administrator of the savings staff in Georgia, then described the progress of the sale in this state.

Arthur Cheatham, deputy administrator of the defense savings staff, took part in arranging the program.

Mein Kampf 2d to Bible In Reported Reich Sales

Despite his dictatoral position, Adolf Hitler is still running in second place as an author in his native land.

Dr. Basil Matthews, Boston University theological school professor, told a Harvard summer school meeting that, although only special religious bookshops are permitted to sell the Bible in Germany, it still outsells Hitler's "Mein Kampf."

LOUELLA PARSONS Says: "Stirling Hayden Will Solo As a Daring Skipper"

By Louella O. Parsons.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 24.—(INS) The socially conscious John Steinbeck is coming down from his pedestal long enough to earn some RKO money. He will adapt his own short stories, "The Red Pony" and "The Long Valley," and these tales are as unlike "Grapes of Wrath" and "Of Mice and Men" as night and day. They feature a little boy and his pony and are sentimental and tender. Lewis Milestone, who directed "Of Mice and Men" and who will direct and produce "The Red Pony," as the combined stories will be called, was responsible for Steinbeck's accepting this offer.

"Red Pony" will be made for RKO by the William Hawks Company, United Productions, the same team that made "My Life With Caroline," Ronald Colman's last movie. "Tortilla Flats," another Steinbeck movie, has been on the fire at M-G-M for Spencer Tracy, but it's a difficult thing to film and has been off and on for the last three years.

Within a year blond Stirling Hayden has become a star. He has good looks, charm, virility, and when he has the experience of a few more pictures, will rank with the top actors. While Hayden has been co-starred with Madeleine Carroll in "Bahama Passage," he has never been given a chance to solo until now. I say now, because Paramount has bought a Ben Ames Williams sea story especially for him. Ames, a Boston newspaper man who writes of New England, is particularly good for Hayden, who hails from Cape Cod. In the Williams story he will play an adventurous young man who has an international reputation as a daring skipper.

Just had a little flash of the subject matter of the new Ernst Lubitsch picture, "To Be or Not to Be." Seems it's a German "Ninotchka" with Hitler and the Nazi gang kidded. Remember how the Communists were taken for a ride in the Greta Garbo movie? Well, Ernst has been on the Alexander Korda lot, interviewing actors for the role of Hitler—a comedy Hitler, as you may suspect. There were about twenty would-be Adolfs out there today, all of them goose-stepping and heil Hitlering to beat the band. Funnily enough, most of these Hitlers looked like the little tramp Charlie Chaplin played years ago, mousache and all . . . Alex flew out to New York to see his wife, Merle Oberon, who is still there, and carried to her the good word about the reviews she got for "Lydia."

Luckiest of Hollywood actors is Robert Montgomery, who has two hit pictures in a row. His movie, "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," is the talk of the critics, and now here comes "Unfinished Business" to give him a chance to be the Bob Montgomery we first knew on the screen, suave, debonair man-about-town. What a picture this is, with Gregory La Cava's finest touches; Irene Dunne so lovely you wonder how she does it, and Preston Foster, who has been re-discovered in this. For smart, amusing dialogue and for situations that are human as well as original, "Unfinished Business" must be hailed as one of the best comedies of 1941.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: Eddie Lowe and Lady Furness, rumor says, are serious and will wed when Eddie's divorce is final; Garbo, who has never worn a jewel in her life, is bedecked in thousands and thousands of dollars in Flato jewelry in her new movie. Paul Flato, talking to her said, "I don't believe you like diamonds." Greta said: "Oh, yes I do—I admire them as I would a beautiful picture—but I'd never want to wear them"; Fritz Lang is very sick and his friends are greatly worried. His girl friend, Virginia Gilmore, is hobbling around with a sprained ankle; Ann Sothern, Red Skelton and Rags Ragland went slumming on Main street Saturday night to get some first-hand pointers for "A Panama Hattie"—not that the boys needed them, they used to be in burlesque; Arthur Murray has a new dance, the yoo-hoola, suggested by General Lear and the yoo-hoo boys. He'll try it out at Camp Ord; Freddie Bartholomew, who is greatly interested in Harold Lloyd's attractive Gloria, is taking her and her sister, Peggy, to the uplifters' picnic and badminton tournament; the Ruby Keeler-John Lowe marriage is closer than even Ruby's family and best friends know; Leatrice Joy and her daughter, Leatrice Gilbert, attracting many admiring glances at the Brown Derby; Carole Landis fell down her front steps right in a bed of roses and was badly scratched up by the thorns; George Burns and his son, Ronnie, both wearing berets, having the time of their lives at the Hillcrest Country Club, where George was teaching his young hopeful to play golf. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

For early fall wear, Ida Lupino selects a two-piece wool dress in a soft shade of yellow beige. It's styled with a gored skirt finished with felled seams and interesting cut top which shows smart stitched detail and soft white turned-down collar. She wears a Kelly green off-the-face chapeau.

Starvation Will Best Discourage Guests Who Become Nuisances

By DIXIE GEORGE

Dear Dixie:

We have some friends who insist upon dropping by to see us on Sunday evening just at meal time. Of course we have to invite them to stay for supper and it ruins the entire evening for us. Sunday night supper is very informal and we eat out of the ice box like everybody else, but we are bored to death with these people. We have only one day to ourselves and up until recently, Sunday night supper was fun. Now it is a nightmare. What can we do? YOUNG COUPLE.

There are a number of things you can do. Don't be at home when your so-called supper guests arrive. If you can see them approaching, turn off the radio and the lights and "play dead." One never has to have guests in the home unless one wants to. Another thing you could do is to fake another invitation when they arrive. Pretend that you have another date and get ready to leave and shoo them out as you dress for this presumed date. Or you could use the starvation method. Just let them sit and do not invite them to eat with you. Tell them, laughingly, that both of you have gone on a diet and that Sunday night supper is one of the meals you have decided to skip. Of course if neither of you can stand the strain while the guests sit and try to hold out for a sandwich or a drink, you can take turns about dashing into the kitchen for a snack, but do not make it too obvious.

GOOD TASTE APPRROVES GIRL'S PLANS FOR VISIT

Dear Dixie:

It is impossible for him to have enough time off to come to see me since he is in the Army. We are engaged, so do you think it will be all right for me to go to see him? I will stay in a hotel, since I have no relatives in that city. Since I know only one person, and he is the one and only, my mother does not think it will be exactly right. Please give me your opinion. WORRIED.

Certainly go to see him. There is no harm whatsoever in your going to the hotel and staying in order to have dates with him. I think it is a grand idea. Go on and see him and have a good time.

GIVE FICKLE BOY DOSE OF SAME TREATMENT

Dear Dixie:

I have been going with an Army boy of three or four months. He says that he loves me and that I am the only girl he loves. But this is what he does: he writes me what a good time he has with the other girl and when I am with him, he is always flirting with the other girls. Do you think he is trying to make a fish out of me or trying to make me jealous? Should I go on believing him when he says he loves me? UNDECIDED.

Yes, go on and believe him when he tells you he loves you, but at the same time do a little flirting yourself and mention some time what a good time you are having with the boys. I think he is just trying to tease you. The thing for you to do is to give him a dose of his own medicine, and don't take him too seriously.

Today's Charm Tip.

Check that impulse to absorb the life of a loved one—husband, child, friend—by replacing the empty life which possessiveness reflects with work, any kind of work, or outside interests.

Variety in Food Texture Is Appetizing

By Ida Jean Kain.

It's good appetizing food that sells good nutrition to the family. Food so good you eat it for the sheer joy of eating—not because it is "good for you." That's the opinion of Uncle Sam's nutritionists as expressed in the "Market Basket." It isn't necessarily expensive food that makes eating fun, but meals that are skillfully planned, well-cooked and attractively served. Cheerful table conversation, comradeship and laughter are the other ingredients suggested, for without these the best-planned assortment of food does not add up to well-being.

The "Market Basket" passes along a number of tips for the homemaker. Perhaps you use all of the pointers given and, in that case, you will enjoy reading them just to find out that you have been doing for years all the things the experts advise.

Color, temperature and texture are important in every meal. Combine the rich brown of a savory pot roast with the orange of carrots — the golden hue of ripe peaches with the deep purple of blackberries—the bright red of tomatoes on cool salad greens.

Variety in texture is important. Don't have all foods soft, like a souffle with the main course and a dessert with a custard base; nor all crisp foods, like cole slaw with corn on the cob and celery. It's better to have interesting contrasts: Crunchy toast with soup; crisp salad with baked beans. Too many watery vegetables at one meal are not appealing, like summer squash with succotash. Two starchy vegetables should not be served at the same meal, like potatoes with lima beans. Grilled tomato with lima beans would be a better combination.

And, of course, all hot foods should be served piping hot, and cold foods really cold.

In the opinion of Uncle Sam's experts, nothing can do so much to get the family interested in eating as good cooking.

There is an art in cooking vegetables, and properly cooked vegetables not only retain their food values but sell the family on their use. Here are some of the basic rules:

When cooking vegetables, use very little water, cook quickly for a short time only and do not add soda. We all realize that vegetables that are cooked for a long time in a large quantity of water taste like nothing on earth! Use the liquids in which the vegetables are cooked—it makes soups, sauces and gravies delicious. good nutrition and good food are one and the same thing—and when the meals look appetizing and taste delicious, you don't have to "sell" nutrition to the family.

Your dietitian,
IDA JEAN KAIN.

MY DAY: Cotton Products Viewed by Press

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

NEW YORK CITY, Tuesday.—I have just finished reading a book by Mrs. Elizabeth Von Hesse called "So To Speak," which was published on August 20. I think it will be of great assistance to everyone interested in improving his ability to think on his feet and speak effectively. There are many quotations in it which are delightful and I was particularly struck by one or two poems by Maxeda Von Hesse, the daughter of the author.

I hope this book will be widely read. It gives good advice for our physical and mental well-being, as well as assuring us, if we follow its advice, a more pleasing presentation of our ideas to the public.

Yesterday was a busy day in Washington. A press conference at 11, to which Dr. Louise Stanley, of the Bureau of Home Economics in the Department of Agriculture, brought the various samples they have developed in cotton stockings.

She then showed us some very charming models of work clothes developed for housewives and women workers on the farm and in the factory. The designs were not only practical but very attractive. Since the department offers its designs to the trade, I hope some of these garments will be on the market shortly at attractive prices.

At noon Mrs. Danna Backus brought Mr. William A. Dillon, of Ithaca, N. Y., winner of the first prize in the national competition for a "Song of the Hour," sponsored by the women's division of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies. He wrote a song many years ago which you will remember entitled "I Want a Girl." That song has been sung from coast to coast in many gatherings in this country.

Mr. Dillon entered this competition because he and Mrs. Dillon apparently make it a hobby to bring up young people. They have brought up eight youngsters besides their own, so the young girl who is at present growing up in their home begged him to win this competition so she might put aside $300 towards her college fund.

Well, the $300 was won and the song is called "Me and My Uncle Sam." I hope you will insist on hearing it. There were many other prize winners, so we shall be hearing a number of good songs that have as their object making us understand some phase of our obligations as citizens of the U. S. A. today.

Mrs. Hobbe, from Texas, Mr. and Mrs. John Herrick and one or two other friends lunched with me yesterday. The afternoon was taken up with appointments. At about 7 the Duke of Kent and his aide, Sir Louis Greig, returned from their day's trip. Our dinner and the evening were pleasant and I said good-bye with regret to our guests.

Miss Thompson and I took the night train for New York City. The day here is going to be spent largely in going over things stored in the warehouse.

Wholesale Pulling of Teeth Guarantees No Sure Cure

By Dr. William Brady.

My daughter had trouble with one eye last December, awoke one morning and could not see out of the eye (writes a reader). She went to a specialist and he gave her treatments. The specialist also ordered her to have nine teeth pulled—she had no trouble with her teeth but an X-ray film showed that nine must be extracted, as they were abscessed. The specialist said that would help her eye.

The specialist was a little too positive about that, if the reader quotes the specialist correctly. It is a way too many old-timers in the specialist racket have. An honest doctor might express the hope or even the opinion that by the sacrifice of nine of the young woman's teeth somehow the septic focus responsible for the trouble in the eye might be eradicated and then the eye trouble might be relieved. But to assert unequivocally that extracting the teeth would help the eye trouble was plainly a bit of quackery which cannot be justified. No matter how good a doctor is nor how eminent or "well-known" a specialist, he simply does not know whether extracting of one or more teeth will bring about any material benefit in such cases of presumptive focal infection. That sort of wholesale extraction of teeth, on the flimsy evidence of an X-ray film, has robbed a multitude of victims of perfectly useful teeth and it has brought the principle (not theory) of focal infection to low repute—and it hasn't helped the reputation of dentists who meekly yank the teeth on the "order" of the bumptious medico.

But now, (continues the reader) a white growth has come over the eye, and the doctor says it will never be any better. She can see a little out of it but that's all.

Now the doctor says her tonsils are very bad and should be taken out. He says the diathermy method will not remove them, they are too bad for that . . . (Mrs. K. C.)

Again the doctor misleads his patient. To say tonsils can be removed by the Old Spanish method (guillotine and snare) but cannot be removed by diathermy merely betrays the doctor's ignorance and unfitness.

Why remove the tonsils or why treat them at all? If it is in the hope that the eye trouble will improve if the source of it was a focus infection in a tonsil and this septic focus is at last disinfected, pasteurized, eradicated, drained or removed, that seems a remote and belated resort now. Hasn't the doctor already advised that the eye trouble will never be any better?

I would not have referred to this case here but for the obvious crudity of the sacrifice of the young woman's teeth.

I'd hesitate to give up even one tooth if I had any trouble which might be ascribed to an "abscessed" tooth, on the X-ray evidence alone.

Novel Neckline Flatters the Youthful

By Lillian Mae.

Pattern 4881.

This unusual frock by Lillian Mae will make you look pretty as a picture! It's Pattern 4881 and exceptionally easy to stitch up. Isn't the sweetheart-shaped neckline charming—have a round neck if you prefer. Buttons down the front make it easy to don this dress in a hurry. Those novel gathered pockets are optional but so gay! Don't you like the way the two front skirt panels give you graceful lines? Top-stitch the yokes, pocket tops and sleeve tabs if you want a fine detail touch.

Pattern 4881 is available in misses' and women's sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 3 7-8 yards 35-inch.

WILSON'S Weekly RECIPES

AUGUST OUR 25th ANNIVERSARY 1916-1941

This month, as Wilson & Co. celebrates its 25th Anniversary, I want to thank you for your friendly use of my columns. Fortunate I am, after my long association with fine foods in Rector's Restaurant, to be connected with a company whose one aim has been to bring to homemakers meats infinitely more tender and tasty.

For example, once smoked hams were all about alike. Then Wilson applied its famous "Secret Process" to its smoked ham, and today you have Certified Smoked Ham, the original tender, extra mild ham, known to "those in the know" as FIRST in Smoked Ham.

Do you want your husband and guests to say, "What a wonderful cook that woman is!"? Then, for your Labor Day holiday, order a Wilson's Certified Smoked Ham.

Allow it to reach room temperature (68° F. to 70° F.). Bake it in an open roaster in a 325° F. to 350° F. oven for 16 minutes to the pound. Take off the skin, score the fat, cover with a half cup of melted currant jelly, and return to a 400° F. oven for 20 minutes to brown.

Think as you eat your Wilson & Co. holiday ham of the men who work that you may have joy in eating . . . the farmer, the railroader, the cattle buyer, the laboratory scientists, the various testers and tasters with their skilled discrimination in flavor, and finally your neighborhood dealer . . . all contributing to the high goal of democracy: "the best for everyone."

THE BREAKFAST AMERICA GOES TO WORK ON

Bacon experts have long known that bacon is at its best when fresh from "the smoke." So Wilson & Co. give Certified Family Style Bacon a richer smoke, slice it in thicker he-man slices, then pack the slices back on the rind, as though the bacon had never been sliced. Result — a fresher, more fragrant flavor that cheers thousands of breakfast tables. Ask for Wilson's Certified Family Style Bacon.

Only Wilson & Co. makes Certified Tender Made Ham the ham you cut with a fork

CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—The coming Labor Day holiday together with reduced receipts and firmness in the dressed trade market brought buyers into the hog market actively today to purchase fresh supplies at 10 to 25 cent higher prices.

Salable hogs, 10,000; total, 13,000; active, 10-20 higher than Tuesday's average on 240 lbs. and down; 15-25 up on heavier weights; top, $12.00 paid freely; good and choice, 180-240 lbs., $11.75-12.00; 240-270 lbs., $11.40-85; 270-300 lbs., $11.10-50; 160-180 lbs., $11.00-90; sows, 10-15 higher; 350-500 lbs., $9.50-10.50; lighter weights to $10.75; shippers took 1,000; holdovers, 1,000.

The Secret of the Marshbanks

Cherry Visits Emma's New Home; Learns That She Is Amy Marshbanks

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Charlotte (Cherry) Rawlings, an orphan at Saint Dorothea's convent school since she was seven, knows almost nothing of her early history but has gradually realized that like other girls at the school she has no family. She questions whether she has the right to her father's name. Judge Judson Marshbank and Emma Haskell, housekeeper for wealthy Mrs. Porteous Porter in San Francisco, are her guardians. When Cherry is 20 Emma gets her a secretarial job with Mrs. Porter, but she goes first to the Marshbank mansion, meeting the judge's young wife, Fran, and his niece, Amy, daughter of his brother Fred, now dead. Life at Mrs. Porter's becomes monotonous, and Cherry is thrilled when Kelly Coates, an artist, sends her a box of candy and she is jealous when he brings Fran to a party at Mrs. Porter's. Emma tells Cherry that her sister, Charlotte, was Cherry's mother. Kelly takes Cherry along so Fran can visit his studio and Cherry senses that he is very much in love with Fran but soon he tells Cherry despondently that Fran has promised the judge she will not see him any more. Mrs. Porter dies, leaving Cherry $1,500, and she learns from Marshbank that his brother Fred, now dead, who was Amy's father, was also her father. Cherry goes to Stanford University and lives with the Pringles. Fran asks her to be Kelly's friend, saying he likes her, and that she has decided to do the honorable thing and avoid him. Kelly goes to Palo Alto and asks Cherry to marry him although Fran will always be the "unattainable woman." Her answer is no; she wants no Fran in the background.

INSTALLMENT XXII.

Emma felt that nobody must know, that her sister's secret must be kept now, of all times, when Fred's wife, who wasn't any too strong, was expecting her own baby any day.

"But poor little Lottie couldn't bear it. One night she suddenly appeared in my brother's room, as he was reading to his wife, and accused him of having ruined her life!"

"If I was the baby," Cherry said, hardly breathing, "I must have been born just about that time, too."

"You were only a few days old. Your mother, poor Lottie, was perhaps weak and feverish, hardly knowing what she was doing."

"But she couldn't have come to the house. She'd have been too weak."

"She may have been in the house with Emma. I have always suspected that Emma was there and the baby was born there. However it was, she rushed into Amelia's room, and there was a sad scene. To Amelia, gentle, dignified little thing that she was, it must have been a fearful shock. She'd lost all control of herself; she was sobbing bitterly. . . ."

"Did she say anything about the baby?"

"No. Amelia never knew about the baby. Of course I don't know what she said," the judge admitted with a faint frown. "But whatever she said, it didn't last long, for Amelia fainted, and when she came to she was very ill, and the baby was born within the hour. Emma came hurrying down and took Lottie away, and a few days later Emma left my mother, and she and Lottie went to live somewhere in the country.

"Fred was killed in a motor smash a few years later, and Amelia didn't survive long. My mother took charge of Amy, and the money my brother left for you I administered as best I could. Emma had sent her sister to this school of Saint Dorothea's for a while, when she was little but Lottie hated it and came back. "A school of character," as the catalog says, and she wanted you sent there.

"And I hope," the man finished, smiling, "that character is exactly what you've got, Cherry. I look to you for great things. Now, about this matter of my mother," said the judge, ignoring Cherry's stricken silence, "she doesn't want Amy to be distressed by this, and she'll not say another word about it. You come to the house when you like, give Amy as much friendship as you can and leave the rest to me."

Cherry was standing; she came over to his chair, bent over him swiftly, and he felt her warm lips against his forehead.

"I love you! There's never any trouble for anyone where you are!" she said, and was gone.

"Oh, the relief, Kelly!" she wrote him from camp. "The relief of doing something you simply don't want to do, and having it over, and your soul as clear as a bell! The judge was a saint, as usual and things stay as they are!

"When will you see me? When college opens. For three delicious weeks before that, as soon as we close camp, Rebecca and I and a darling girl named Lucie Fargo are going on a wild cruise. Up to Victoria—we'll actually be out of America, imagine!—and on the way home we're going to stay with Lucie's grandmother, who has a country hotel. That's up in Mendocino county, not far from Aunt Emma's place; it's only about 30 miles. So I've written Aunt Emma that I'm coming over to see her.

"I wrote you that I've made the entrance exams and am admitted; credits to spare, too, so score one for Saint Dorothea's! Life is all exciting."

And she signed it "Your devoted and obedient Marchioness."

But despite high spirits she dreaded the visit to Emma, and was glad that it was to be put off until the end of the holiday.

In due time she and Rebecca and Lucie drove along the ocean coast, and into high mountains, and through valleys where great rivers raced. It was all glorious and restful and exciting. To have climbed into the car at the kitchen door of the Pringle house in a quiet California town and to descend from it in what might have been an English city was a sort of miracle.

So that when they were back in California, with the great mountains and the days of laughter and change and adventure behind them, Cherry felt herself older, wiser, braver, and she shook off the little instinctive wincing of her spirit at the thought of encountering Emma again, and on a certain sober September afternoon presented herself at the door of Emma's cabin with nothing more than a little shyness in her manner.

Emma lived in a lumber country. Cherry, for her drive of 30 miles, had borrowed the car, leaving the other girls with Lucie's grandmother.

The door to Emma's main room was half open; there were no locks in Upper Camp. The interior of the room was dark, the walls rough pine board and batting, the furnishings simple and useful and homemade. There were crushed cushions on a couch before a cold fireplace in which a pyramid of gray ashes stood.

Emma had been lying on the couch, evidently napping; she welcomed Cherry pleasantly enough, but without an embrace, and put the girl into a chair at the hearth while she started a fire and lighted one dim kerosene lamp.

"Cherry," she said suddenly, "I wanted to see you. I'd rather tell you than write you. I'm going to be married."

Cherry stared at her in amazement, laughed delightedly.

"Lumberman?"

"No. A man I used to know 20 years ago. You've never heard his name; nobody has. He's not an American; we shan't live in America."

"Aunt Emma! But who is he?"

The plain face flushed as Emma turned from stirring the fire.

"I'd rather you didn't know."

Cherry sat back, snubbed and humiliated. "I'm sorry," she said stiffly.

"I don't mean it the way you think I do," Emma pursued, in her slow, painstaking fashion. "I mean that it will be better for you and everyone if you don't know. I will be gone from here—now that I've seen you—in a day or two. I shall lock the door, get into my car and drive away. I've no friends here, although they're all kindly neighbors. I'll meet—my friend next week, be married, sell my car and go away. It's better so."

"But, Aunt Emma, why?" the girl said, recovered from her moment's setback, and full of sympathy. "Even if it's only to write each other, once a year, it's something. You're not . . . " She laughed as at an absurdity. You're not trying to hide something, are you?"

"I've hidden something for 20 years," Emma said quietly. In the shadows Cherry could not see her face. "It touches you nearer than it does me," the older woman continued. "I want you to know it, even though it may make no difference in the way you live, and what you feel and do. What I did was wrong. Whether it's a prison offense or not I don't know. I'm risking that. I'm risking your not caring enough, or anyone's caring enough, to follow me—to have me traced. I can tell you in a few words."

Cherry sat staring, her face colorless, her eyes blazing, her lips unable to utter a sound.

"I don't think I heard what you said, Aunt Emma," Cherry said faintly, after a long while.

"Yes, you heard me," Emma said. She repeated what she had said before. "You ought to know—not that you ever can prove it!—that you aren't Charlotte Rawlings at all, Cherry. You ought to know that you're Amelia Marshbanks."

Cherry swallowed with a dry throat, essayed to speak, failed.

"You said, Aunt Emma—" she stammered after a silence and stopped. "You didn't say that I'm Amy . . ."

Breath failed her again. The other woman looked at her somberly.

"I'll tell you what happened," Emma said in her unemotional way "I'd have sworn 20 years ago that wild horses couldn't drag it out of me. But you're different from what I thought you'd be. Everything's different. Time was when I wanted everything good in the world to come to Amy Marshbanks. But she isn't like Lottie; she isn't like her mother. She's proud, superficial; proud as her grandmother is. They've made her like that. Well! Let it go.

"I went down to the city last week to see the judge about moving my account from the bank," Emma pursued. "I have it all in traveler's checks now. I can take it with me. When I called at the Marshbanks house, Amy was going up the stairs with two other girls. She saw me waiting there in the hall; she didn't even give me a nod. 'It's just one of Granny's old servants,' she said. I think I made up my mind at that minute to tell you that you're the one who ought to have the money, you're the one who ought to be going to the dances and to Honolulu and to Europe!

"It won't do you any good, Cherry. There's no proof. No one knew except Lottie, and she's been dead these 13 years."

"Silence. Silence. After awhile Emma's voice again:

"I was 12 years older than Lottie; my mother died when she was two. She was pretty the way Amy is, only slighter and smaller, with Amy's kind of hair. After my father died we lived with an aunt and uncle; they were'nt always kind to me, but everyone adored Lottie. When my aunt died I kept house for my uncle and Lottie was my baby. When she was was six I took her to her first school. I did her housework with her.

"My father was John Rawlings—he could never do much for us, and when he died and my uncle and aunt died—I was 19 then—Lottie was all I had left.

"Well, I married Tom Haskell, and he was a father to her. She was 10, and pretty as a picture. One Sunday we were driving along comfortably, Lottie squeezed in between me and Tom on the front seat and suddenly a big truck smashed in on us from the left. Tom was dead at the wheel; I was broken almost in two. But little Lottie was protected by our bodies.

"Three months later I went to the Marshbanks. I tried St. Dorothea's for Lottie—an old friend of mine was a Sister there—but she couldn't stand it, so I boarded her with a fine Irishwoman who had three children. I saw her often, every week nearly.

Screen Stars And Comedian On Music Hall

George Raft and Maureen O'Sullivan Visit 'Mc' Ameche.

Don Ameche will spread the welcome mat for Comedian Jerry Lester when the quick-witted and glib-tongued young fun-maker returns to the Kraft Music Hall tonight minus his tonsils. He'll no doubt find it pretty difficult to keep from laughing too much, but that's the doctor's orders until his throat is completely healed.

Guests for the full hour of variety aired over the Red network of NBC and WSB at 8 p. m. will be Annamary Dickey, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and George Raft and Maureen O'Sullivan of the movies.

Miss Dickey won the Metropolitan auditions of the air two years ago and has had a full schedule of singing engagements ever since. George Raft and Maureen O'Sullivan have appeared in the hall before and entered readily into the informal hilarities.

The veterans of the hall—Songstress Connie Boswell, the Music Maids, Ken Carpenter and John Scott Trotter and the band—will help keep things moving.

Connie Boswell will sing "Yes Indeed," "I Guess I'll Have to Dream the Rest," "Sunrise Serenade," "Nighty Night" and "Boogie Wooglie Piggie." Don Ameche's songs will be "Hi, Neighbor" and "Amour." Together, Don and Connie will sing "City Called Heaven."

The story of how the little town of Round Mountain, Nev., found itself in newspaper headlines back in 1906 is told by the Old Ranger on Columbia network's "Death Valley Days" tonight at 7 o'clock over WGST.

The comical series of events started when a miner picked up the Chicago Matrimonial Gazette from the seat of a stage coach and showed it to a friend. The town, for the most part, was made up of 51 bachelors.

The paper passed from hand to hand as the miners discussed and compared the qualifications of the girls who advertised for husbands. In no time at all, 50 men had written to 50 women, and the marriage-minded ladies started arriving.

Henry Aldrich's ambition to become a mandolin virtuoso involves the whole town of Centerville in a general feud and old friends become enemies during the broadcast of "The Aldrich Family," starring Ezra Stone and written by Clifford Goldsmith, over the NBC-Red network and WSB tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

Harry von Zell, absent from the airwaves for the last month, while vacationing, will return to his microphone duties.

Henry learns that all he has to do to win a mandolin free is sell 10 three-year subscriptions to a magazine. He finally finds the required number of victims, including three members of his own family, but the letter containing the money is misplaced. This trivial detail leads to a series of accusations of thievery, blackmail and lies among the families of Henry and his pals. In the end, everyone is peeved with everyone else, except the three boys, who, though responsible for the entire mess, remain bosom pals.

Cookie Jar in Army.

On the theory that the cookie jar is one of the most potent symbols of homelike atmosphere, cookie jar extension service has been installed in the Service Club at Camp Funston, Kan., to preserve such atmosphere for possibly homesick lads now in the service.

Method in the Heat.

Secretary Bill Medaris, of the Hollins, Okla., Chamber of Commerce, couldn't get the board of directors interested in installing a cooling system in his office. So he scheduled directors' meetings daily in the office at 2 p. m.—hottest part of the day.

All-Star Football On Radio Tonight

Football authorities and outstanding coaches will be heard analyzing the game between the halves of the College All-Stars-Chicago Bears football clash to be broadcast over the Mutual network and WATL beginning at 8:15 p. m. tonight.

Handling the interview assignment, from Soldiers' Field, Chicago, will be Guy Savage. Bob Elson will be heard during the actual play-by-play broadcast of the contest, which in the past has been characterized by spectacular and wide-open football.

More and More, Patricia Ryan appears to be a real-life "Claudia"—the role she plays in the CBS "Claudia and David" series. Following the broadcast in which Claudia gets into all sorts of trouble learning to drive an automobile. Pat turned to Richard "David" Kollmar and remarked: "I really don't drive a car, you know. Why don't you take me out some day and I'll take advantage of the instructions I received on the program."

Lost: One- flop-eared, fuzzy headed "Mad Russian." Answers to name of Bert Gordon. Finder will please notify Eddie Cantor, care of NBC, New York. Gordon disappeared one month ago on vacation and hasn't been heard from since. Cantor wants him back in town immediately to prepare for the return of Eddie's "Time to Smile" series on the NBC-Red Network starting Wedensday, September 3.

25 Additional Dental Clinics Will Be Formed

Free Treatment To Be Given to Indigent Children, 6-14.

Five experimental dental clinics—giving free treatment to indigent children, 6-14—have proved so successful in operation that 25 more clinics will be established in the next few months, it was announced yesterday following a meeting of the public health committee of the Georgia Dental Association here.

The committee, headed by Dr. Homer ... Davis as chairman, heard a report of five months' activities at the clinics and approved the expansion plans.

Dr. J. G. Williams director of the division of dental health education of the State Department of Health, said local dentists in each of the communities are in charge of the treatments. Funds for the clinics are provided by the federal government.

1,172 Admissions.

Miss Annie Taylor, educational director of the division of dental health education, gave a complete report showing that total admissions to these clinics was 1,172, and 41 per cent of this total was in the six to eight years old group. It is in the younger age group that these clinics can give the greatest help, dental leaders said.

Of the entire total number of patients the dental work was completed on 73.9 per cent of the admitted patients in the experimental period of five months.

It is significant to note that only 90 permanent teeth were extracted and that 1,251 first molars were filled, Miss Taylor pointed out. A total of 598 clinic hours was reported for the period and 21 dentists participated in the work. The clinics were in Brooks county, at Quitman; C lquitt county, at Moultrie; Floyd county, at Rome; Glynn county, at Brunswick, and Thomas county, at Thomasville.

Treatments Free.

The dental treatments are given free to the indigent children.

Besides Dr. Davis, committee chairman, other members are Dr. W. A. Garrett and Dr. Frank Lamons, also of Atlanta. The session was held in Dr. Lamons' office in the Doctors' building.

The public health committee of the state dental association also unanimously adopted resolutions recommending that school pupils be permitted to receive dental treatments during school hours.

"Children who have spent the entire day in school are unfit subjects for difficult or protracted dental operations," the committee declared in the resolutions.

The best hours for children to receive dental treatment is between 8 o'clock and 11 o'clock in the morning, it was said.

The school authorities will be urged not to charge a pupil as absent who has gone to the dentist's office for treatment.

Textile Ceiling Not Aimed at Cotton Prices

OPA Official Tells Garment Group Higher Margins Allowed.

The Office of Price Administration has no intention of fixiing a ceiling for textile prices in order to hold down the price of cotton, members of the southern garment industry were told yesterday.

James P. Davis, a director in the OPA, added that ceiling prices so far established for the textile industry "allow higher manufacturing margins than at any other time in the previous 20 years, except at the very height of one or two periods like 1937."

Along with Donald B. Tansil, vice-president of the Pepperell Manufacturing Company of New York, Davis spoke at the final meeting of southern garment industry convention.

Pointing out that Leon Henderson, price administrator, at first fixed the prices for only such basic commodities as copper and aluminum, Davis said, "In the case of textiles and hides he adopted a policy of watchful waiting and did not object to somewhat higher prices as long as production was increasing."

Davis said by the end of January the price of cotton textiles reached a high regarded as "extremely satisfactory" by the industry. He added that within a few weeks 75 per cent of the textile industry would have price ceilings.

"However, I want to add a word about compliance. Every industry group subject to a ceiling price is complying, although everybody knows that he cannot be punished for failure to comply."

Donald Tansil urged garment cutters to require retailers to honor contracts, regardless of price drops. He said some retailers were signing "forward contracts" with garment manufacturers when prices were high, and then refusing to accept the goods if the price fell before delivery.

Group Flays Job Discrimination

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27—(AP)—The OPM's fair employment practice committee today joined the government's council of personnel administrators in recommending to President Roosevelt that he direct all federal departments and agencies to eliminate discrimination against Negroes in the hiring of government workers.

The six-man fair practice group made its first call on the President since the committee was created by executive order two months ago. The order urged that discrimination be stopped both in defense industries and the government.

Mark Ethridge, of Louisville, committee chairman, said the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission had shown fine co-operation.
